GRENVILLE RESEARCH

(Revision A – 29th August 2012)

This report has been produced to accompany the Historical Research and Statement of Significance Reports into Nos. 1 to 5 Bridge Street, Bideford. It should be noted however, that the connection with the GRENVILLE family has at present only been suggested in terms of Nos. 1, 2 and 3 Bridge Street.

I am indebted to Andy Powell for locating many of the reference sources referred to below, and in providing valuable historical assistance to progress this research to its conclusions.

In the main Statement of Significance Report, the history of the buildings was researched as far as possible in an attempt to assess their Heritage Value, with a view to the owners making a decision on the future of these historic Bideford properties. I hope that this will be of assistance in this respect.

Executive Summary:

- This report and detailed research proves beyond reasonable doubt that the celebrated explorer Sir Richard GRENVILLE was born in Bideford on 15th June 1542.
- The location of the Manor House of the GRENVILLE's has also been established, this having been on the site of the present No's 1 to 3 Bridge Street, thereby establishing Sir Richard's birthplace.
- The buildings which now occupy this site were erected around 1630 (\pm 10 years) – this having been proved from dendro-chronological analysis of original timbers.
- Historic features within this building have been linked conclusively with the GRENVILLE family.
- There are suggested elements of an earlier building (foundations, sections of wall, etc.), which are presumably remnants of the mediaeval manor house formerly on this same site.
- This report also attempts to identify the location of the 'grand mansion' which Sir Richard GRENVILLE is known to have constructed on Bideford riverfront in 1585. The site of this house has also been established within reasonable probability.
- None of the above facts have previously been established.

I am grateful to the present owners of No's 1 to 5 Bridge Street for commissioning this research. It is hoped that this will lead to the restoration of these buildings, and for a fitting purpose being established for them.

Who were the GRENVILLE family?

In 1895, the then vicar of Bideford, Rev. Roger GRANVILLE M.A., researched and published a history of the GRANVILLE's ('The History of the Granville Family, Traced back to Rollo, First Duke of Normandy', published 1895, 495 pages). The exhaustive work is certainly the main reference book on the subject of this family, but may contain suppositions now proved incorrect. It could also not have taken account of historical sources unknown at the time of writing. However, it does include transcripts of GRENVILLE documents which have subsequently been lost to us (mostly Wills, etc, destroyed during WW2), so the book is of unique value in this respect.

The following summary of the GRENVILLE lineage illustrates their role in Bideford's history. Whilst this summary starts with the first-known GRENVILLE to have associations with Bideford, this family's lineage can be shown to have come from the Normans in Rouen, France, and prior to that, the Royal families of Norway ('Normans' being a contraction of 'Norsemen' – the Viking settlers who invaded and settled Britain and northern France in the 8th and 9th centuries).

To have a continuous recorded lineage is remarkable given the period of history in question, and with a few possible anomalies, it does appear to be valid. The standard generational gap is generally calculated to be about 25 to 30 years (but in practice could be anywhere from 15 to 55. Generational gaps of prima-genitor decent are shorter, in that they usually relate to the first-born male, who continues the descent passing land and property down through the years.

N.B. Some years are written in this report as a 'split year', eg: 1549/50.

This is the conventional way of identifying years in the period prior to 1752, when New Years Day was celebrated on 25th March.

eg: A date of 20th March would in the original documents have been recorded as 20th March 1549, whereas in today's calendar we would know this as being 20th March 1550.

The Domesday Book tells us that at the time of the Norman Conquest the Manor of Bideford was owned by Brictric, along with a dozen other manors. These were seized in 1068 and given by William the Conqueror to his wife Matilda. When Matilda died in 1083, the lands reverted to the Crown.

Some references then say that these lands were then given to Richard de GRANDVILLE by William the Conqueror as a reward for his services.

Other sources say that the lands were given to Sir Richard de GRANVILLE by William Rufus (ie: William the second, who ruled 1087 to 1100).

[White's Devonshire Directory of 1850].

If the former is correct, then this grant of land was probably in thanks for services rendered in the invasion of Glamorganshire with his brother Robert FITZ-HAMON. This Robert FITZ-HAMON is believed to have established a settlement in South Wales around 1093, but more recent research suggests that Cardiff was established much earlier, around 1081 with the invasion by the Normans, so a grant in 1083 would appear to be about right.

Either way, it is clear that this Richard de GRANVILLE was the first person to own the manor of Bideford. As a young man he assisted the King and was rewarded with land, but as an older man nearing his end, he probably felt the need to save his soul and founded an Abbey at Neath in Glamorganshire in 1129 (on lands that Richard was known to have been granted earlier). However, from the following source we know that Richard was living in Bideford at the time:

"Sir Richard Greenvil, Knight, lived and was richly landed at Bediford in this County. He was one of twelve peers which accompanied Robert Fitz-Haimon in his expedition against the Welsh, when he overthrew Rhese ap Theodore and divided the conquered country betwixt his assistants. This Sir Richard though in his partage, good land was at Neath in Glamorganshire allotted unto him erecting and endowing a monastery at Neath for Cistercians, bestowing all his military acquests on them for their maintenance. Thus having finished and settled this foundation, he returned to his own patrimony at Bediford in this County, where he lived in great repute, 1100, under the reign of King Rufus, and may seem to have entailed hereditary valour on his name and still flourishing posterity."

[History of the Worthies of England, by Thomas Fuller (1608-1661), published 1662, reprinted 1840].

It is interesting to note that recent discoveries in the ruins of Neath Abbey discovered floor tiles upon which appeared a representation of the GRENVILLE arms.

When the last of the direct male line of the GRENVILLEs died out with the death of the Earls of Bath in 1711, the title transferred to George GRANVILLE of Cornwall (son of Sir Bevill GRENVILLE – generation 18). In the same year, King James III bestowed various titles onto George GRANVILLE, including ‘Baron Lansdowne of Bideford’, although four years later he was imprisoned in the Tower of London suspected of being a Jacobite. He died in 1734 and is buried in St Clement Danes, London.

The GRENVILLE estate was eventually carved up between the 1st Earl of Bath’s daughters Jane and Grace, whose descendants include the Duke of Sutherland, Earls of Clarendon, and Viscount Althorp, and therefore to the present Royal Family’s children.

From the above lineage, we can see that the GRENVILLE family have had associations with Bideford since time immemorial [that’s actually a correct usage of this phrase, as the legal definition of this term was decreed in 1275 to be ‘any time prior to 1189’ – the date Richard I came to the throne, and therefore before living memory].

As Lords of the Manor of Bideford, they would have had an established Manor House (legal place of business and probably of residence) in a central location, although earlier residences would be more like a fortified home. Such later manors were generally sited next or near to the Parish Church, although the farm and estate-lands could be spread anywhere within the vicinity.

What this report will now illustrate, are subsequent references to the GRENVILLE’s landholdings, activities and residencies in Bideford.

The early GRENVILLEs in Bideford:

1126:

The first GRENVILLE was known to be living in Bideford in 1126 (generation 1), although they were probably allocated land there in 1083.

1204:

A Charter was granted to Bideford by Sir Richard GRENVILE (generation 4) somewhere around 1202-1204, possibly the latter as this was the year that his father died. This Charter refers to Common land on the western side of the river Torridge, and also further land on the east side of the river.

[For a full transcript of this Charter, see Appendix 2]

1232:

A small Saxon church was known to be in Bideford at this time: “Henry de TRACEY (and 3 other named people) are appointed Justices of the Assize on the presentation on the morrow of the close of Easter, between Richard de GREINVILL petitioner, and the Abbot of Tewkesbury deforciant. 2nd June 1232.”

[Inkerman Rogers: Concise History of Bideford, page 8; taken from Calendar of State Papers, British Museum]

From the year 1256, we have the following reference:

“The Archbishops eldest brother Richard, the sixth in succession of that name, held in the 40th of Henry III. (1256) ‘viginti libratis terrae in com: Devon,’ by Knight’s service, and very large possessions elsewhere, and not being at that time a Knight was summoned to take that degree. As ‘Sir Richard de GRANVILLA, Knight’ he grants Yrania, daughter of Thomas de GRENVIL, and to her heirs and assigns, two burgages and six acres of land in Bideford, which escheated to him from Roger de BOTELEK, of Great Cleve, and ‘lie on the east of Bideford High Street,’ the tenement of William BOTREAU south, and that of William WHING north.’ In 1261 he presented to the living of Bideford, Henry de BRATTON or BRACON, as the name is usually spelt, a celebrated lawyer as well as a divine.”

The above quote refers to ‘Bideford High Street’, but this is unlikely to refer to the High Street named as such today. Streets did not have such names in the 13th century, although the above reference may have referred to the main commercial street of Bideford, in which case this would probably be Allhalland Street or Mill Street. The High Street leading up the hill is unlikely to have been fully developed until the 17th century, similar to Bridgeland Street, which was laid out in 1684. However, we still appear to have reference to the main centre of Bideford, so from the above we can infer that William WHING owned the land on the north side of Bideford, with the GRENVILLEs owning land near the centre, and the BOTREAU family having land further up river to the south. This could suggest that ‘Old Ford’ in Bideford was built by the BOTREAU family (they were known to be wealthier than the GRENVILLE’s at that time, and Old Ford is believed to date back to at least the 1300s. The William BOTREAU mentioned is part of the family from Boscastle and long-time owners of Hartland Abbey before the dissolution).

This should place the GRENVILLE lands in the area near the commercial centre of Bideford, and in control of the local Parish Church, ie: right in the Bridge Street area.

Bideford's Parish Church was completed in this year, and dedicated to St Mary, although earlier chapels almost certainly existed on or near the same site. However, this completion date cannot be a coincidence just 3 years after the GRENVILLEs had further lands granted here.

[Inkerman Rogers: Concise History of Bideford, page 8]

1261:

The first recorded Rector of Bideford was appointed on 26th April 1261 (Henry Le BRATTON), his Patron being Richard de GRANVILLE (of generation 6, but who died without issue).

[Inkerman Rogers: Concise History of Bideford, page 9]

1272:

In 1272, Sir Richard GRENEVYLE (same person as above) obtained a new Charter for a market for Bideford on Mondays, and a fair at the Feast of St Margaret the Virgin. The original Charter does not exist, but a copy is in the National Archives.

The Burgesses paid Sir Richard GRENEVYLE four marks of silver for this Charter. At this time, it was found that Sir Richard held 'antiquas furcas' and 'an assize of bread and water at Bideford' and free warren on the east side of the Toryz (Torridge) water.

It is generally accepted that a primitive Bridge was constructed at Bideford in the late 1280s. There is a reference that Bishop QUIVIL paid money for maintenance of a bridge. If that is the case, then the construction of this crossing can probably be ascribed to the same Richard de GRENEVYLE who gave Bideford its 1272 Charter. Rev GRANVILLE in his history (page 53) speculates that this Bridge may have suffered from lack of maintenance, or was more likely swept away by flood. A stronger bridge was believed to have been built about 40 years afterwards.

1297:

In 1297, Sir Richard GRENEVYLE (of generation 6, but who died without issue) was summoned to London with other Devon men, to 'Go with the King beyond the seas for their honour and the preservation and profit of the Kingdom'. In 1301, his services were again summoned, to march against the Scots from Berwick-upon-Tweed, with Edward I.

[Rev. Granville's History of the Grenville Family, 1895, page 49; taken from Ryley's Pleadings in Parliament, p.483]

1299:

The Cartulary of Launceston Priory confirms that Richard de GREYNVILE was writing from Bideford on 20th May this year, confirming the grant of a charter regarding estates near Kilkhampton in Cornwall.

[Lambeth Palace MS.719, t's published by Devon and Cornwall Record Society, ed. P L Hull, 1987]

1318:

Bartholomew GREYNVILE (generation 6) appears with the title: 'Lord of Bideford'.

[Rev. Granville's History of the Grenville Family, 1895, page 49; quoting deed granted at Bideford]

1327:

The Long Bridge at Bideford is thought to have been built around this time, and is attributed to Theobald de GRENVILLE (generation 8), although there is evidence that an earlier Bridge existed across the Torridge here. Given that we believe the site of the GRENVILLE main Manor House to be adjacent to the Church, it seems highly significant that Theobald would have had this bridge constructed at the most convenient location near to his property. The River Torridge has no particular narrowing point at this location, and seems to remain the same width for a couple of hundred metres in either direction. Its construction at the bottom of the road below the Manor seems highly significant, and an attempt to highlight the importance of the GRENVILLE's manorial status.

The original Ford river crossing over the Torridge was about a third of a mile upstream from the present bridge, close to where Old Ford house stands. We believe that this was owned by the BOTREAU family in the 1250s, who would have controlled this crossing point. The construction of a Bridge on lands owned by the adjacent GRENVILLE family, may have represented a power-struggle between these two families.

The river-frontage at Bideford has been pushed outwards over the years, and Allhalland Street is named after the All Hallows Chapel which existed at the western end of the Bridge. This Chapel would probably have been on the site of the present-day Bridge Buildings or the Town Hall (ie: adjacent to the Manor), and an important cross-roads was created at this location.

1332:

In 1332 a Tax Assessment showed that there were 30 Burgesses paying rents to Theobald de GRENVILLE, Lord of the Manor at Bideford.

[History of Early Bideford]

1340 onwards:

From the various sources above, we can see that the GRENVILLEs lived continuously at Bideford from the date of the manor being granted in the 11th century to about 1340, when the first mention of 'Stowe' (a manor within the parish of Kilkhampton) appears. Between 1340 and 1541, Bideford and Stowe are the only houses from which the GRENVILLE family appear to write.

There is an interesting correlation between father and sons over the generations whereby the young family GRENVILLEs write from Stowe, whereas when they get older they tend to write from Bideford.

Theobald GRENEVILLE is recorded as being having a tenement in Bideford.

[Inkerman Rogers: Concise History of Bideford, page 9; taken from Inquisitions, Feudal Aids, British Museum]

1449:

Thomas GREYNVILLE (generation 11) is recorded as granting a tenement in Bideford to a Richard ASHRIGGE. Four years later in 1453, there is a further grant of land in Bideford to a Richard REDE.

1513:

This dual home-owning is illustrated by Sir Thomas GRAYNFIELD (d.1513 Bideford – generation 12) who is at Stowe with his large family until at least 1504, when his uncle is known to be a priest at Bideford [Rev Granville's History, page 58]. The Will of Sir Thomas GRAYNFIELD [see Appendix 3 for verbatim transcript] shows the affection that Thomas had for Bideford rather than Stowe. He chose to be buried at Bideford, and to make an altar there in his memory. Also to appoint a priest at Bideford to pray there for his ancestors and his descendants.

This is good evidence of the earlier lineage, and of hopeful later lineage of the GRENVILLEs at Bideford.

Shortly before 1504, Thomas's heir Roger GRENVILLE (generation 13) is living at Stowe, whereas Richard (generation 14) remained at Stowe till his death. This means that his son Roger GRENVILLE must have been at Bideford during his early married life at least until Oct 1541, the date of the lease signing for Buckland Abbey.

With the purchase of Buckland Abbey in 1541, the home of the GRENVILLEs becomes more uncertain, as they then have three possible places of abode.

The celebrated Sir Richard GRENVILLE (generation 16) is born. His father Roger died 3 years later in 1545 whilst serving as Captain on the 'Mary Rose'.

1548:

Authority is granted by Lord SEYMOUR High Admiral of England, to three people in Devon to commission 'privateers' to take French ships and goods. These were Sir Peter CAREW, Sir Thomas DENYS, and Sir Richard GRENFELDE (generation 14). This is further confirmation of the maritime background of the GRENVILLE family.

1575:

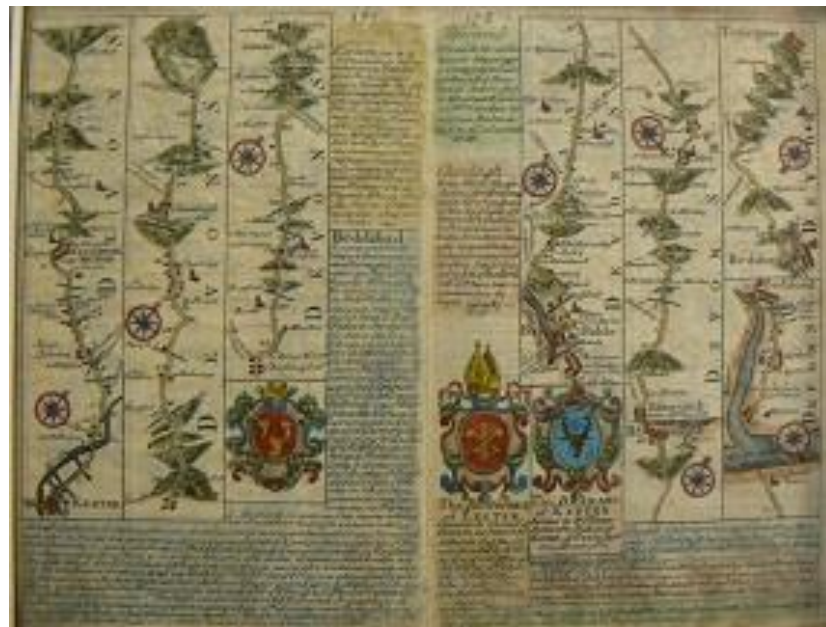

A Charter of Bideford is agreed this year by Sir Richard GRENVILLE.

Bideford's original Charter of 1272 had fallen into disuse by this time, and the Town was very run down. Sir Richard GRENVILLE could apparently see a good economic future for Bideford, and in 1572 (the 300th anniversary of the original Charter) applied for a modern new Charter to take Bideford forward into the 17th Century. This was given Royal assent in 1575, and was instrumental in transforming Bideford from a provincial coastal settlement, into a thriving port of national importance. [For a full transcript of this 1575 Charter, see Appendix 6].

1577:

'Sir' Richard GRENVILLE (generation 16) is Knighted.

1600s:

[Ref: NDRO 246/32]

The GRENVILLEs have been held in high regard in Bideford for many centuries, not just in modern times. This road map (undated, but from the 1600s) contains the following text in its description of Bideford:

“The GRANVILS have been Lords of the Town ever since ye Conquest of which great & honourable family was Sir Richard GRANVILLE Knight was so instrumental in ye conquest of Glamorganshire after many brave feats against the Welsh founded an Abbey at Neath in that County and so returned hither.

Another Sir Richard of the same name and family in Queen Elizabeth’s lifetime maintained a very extra ordinary sea fight against ye Spaniards for with one ship having on board but 180 soldiers he fought 24 hours with 54 Spanish Galleons of which 30 sail were aboard at several times & yet at last yielded upon honourable terms after his powder was spent having slain above 1000 Spaniards & sunk 4 of their stoutest ships.

Theobald GREENVILLE founded ye noble Bridge of Biddeford which equals if not excells all other in England admitting a passage for a ship of 50 or 60 tun thro’ some of its arches. Concerning which Bridge it is strangely related that ye inhabitants of ye Town had several times attempted to build it but in vain, not being able to find a firm foundation. At last one Richard GORNARD Priest of ye Place was admonished by a vision to found it near a rock which he should find rolled from ye higher ground upon ye Strand who finding ye rock was represented in his dream presently informed ye Bishop of ye Diocese & Sir Theobald GREENVILLE Lord of ye Town of it Whereupon Sir Theobald laid ye foundation & ye Bishop granted indulgencies to all such as should be contributors to so usefull & necessary a work which effectually raised mony sufficient to compleat ye Bridge & also to keep it in perpetual repair.”

Buckland Abbey:

From an Internet Guide to Buckland Abbey, we have the following text:

"Intending to pass Buckland Abbey on to his son Roger, Sir Richard GRENVILLE [senior] left the property mostly in its original state. Roger GRENVILLE was never to enjoy this benevolence as his life was cut short with the untimely sinking of Henry VIII's favourite flagship, the Mary Rose. However, his son (named Richard after his grandfather) would convert the monastic buildings of Buckland Abbey into a stately home. In a move far ahead of his age, the undeviatingly Protestant, Sir Richard GRENVILLE decided to convert Buckland Abbey's church into his home. Retaining Buckland Abbey's square tower and much of its intrinsic architectural structure, he inserted three floors and a great hall. A spectacular room, Buckland Abbey's great hall was decorated with bizarre plaster and wooden friezes now deemed by many to be grotesque rather than artistic. Merely four years after finishing his reconstruction, financial constraints [see: 1] led Sir Richard GRENVILLE to sell Buckland Abbey to his cousin, Sir Francis DRAKE in 1581 [see 2*]."*

The Great Hall at Buckland Abbey created by Sir Richard GRENVILLE (1542-1591).

Comments on the above:

1*: By 1574, GRENVILLE had amassed a fortune to finance his plan to sail to the South Sea (Pacific Ocean). When he was turned down, he purchased Upcott and Landcross estates (south of Bideford). It was also at about this time he petitioned Queen Elizabeth for Bideford's charter. He created the port of Bideford in 1575 (of which he had complete control over revenues), and became an Alderman of Bideford's first council. He was also High Sheriff of Cornwall in 1577. Therefore any suggestions that he was short of cash, is somewhat misplaced.

2*: The sale actually took place in 1580 to a Christopher HARRIS from Radford in Plymouth. He in turn sold the Abbey to Francis DRAKE the following year.

Biography of Sir Richard GRENVILLE:

At this point, the following summary-biography of Sir Richard GRENVILLE (taken from Wikipedia) will probably be of background use: [some comments have been inserted thus, in brown]

Sir Richard Grenville (6th [should be 15th] June 1542 – 10th September 1591) (sp. var: Greynvile, Greneville or Greenfield) was an English sailor, sea captain and explorer. He took part in the early English attempts to settle the New World, and also participated in the fight against the Spanish Armada. He died in 1591 at the Battle of Flores, characteristically fighting against overwhelming odds, and refusing to surrender his ship to the far more numerous Spanish. He was the grandfather of Sir Richard Grenville, [should say Sir Bevill Grenville] of English Civil War fame.

Early life:

Grenville's birthplace is unknown, but he spent much of his childhood at Clifton Arundell House after his mother remarried Thomas Arundell following the death of his father Sir Roger Grenville, who was Captain of the Mary Rose when it sank in Portsmouth Harbour in 1545. He was a cousin of Sir Walter Raleigh and the privateer Sir Francis Drake. At age 17, Grenville began law studies at the Inner Temple. On 19 November 1562, he was in an affray in the Strand in which he ran Robert Bannister through with his sword and left him to die. He was pardoned for this crime. At age 18 he inherited his estates at Stowe in Cornwall, and Bideford and Buckland Abbey in Devon, England. This year he was also made Member of Parliament for Launceston. In 1565 Grenville married Mary St Leger (who outlived Grenville, dying aged about 80 on 9 November 1623. She lies buried at St Mary's Church, Bideford.) The family initially lived at Buckland Abbey before moving to a newly built house at Bideford.

Career:

In pursuit of his military career, Grenville fought against the Turks in Hungary in 1566. In 1569, he arrived in Ireland with Sir Warham St. Leger to arrange for the settlement of lands in the barony of Kerricurrihy. These had been mortgaged to St Leger by the Earl of Desmond. At about this time, Grenville also seized lands for colonisation at Tracton, to the west of Cork harbour. Sir Peter Carew had asserted his claim to lands in south Leinster. St Leger settled nearby, and Humphrey Gilbert pushed westward from Idrone along the Blackwater River. All of these English efforts to take over land in the south of Ireland led to bitter disputes. They escalated into the first of the Desmond rebellions, led by James Fitzmaurice Fitzgerald.

As sheriff of Cork, Grenville witnessed the rebellion in which Fitzmaurice, along with the Earl of Clancar, James Fitzedmund Fitzgerald (the Seneschal of Imokilly); Edmund Fitzgibbon (the White Knight); and others, attacked Tracton. They overcame the English defence with pickaxes and killed nearly the entire garrison. The three surviving English soldiers were hanged the next day by the Irish. Fitzmaurice threatened the imminent arrival of Spanish forces. Having robbed the citizens of Cork, he boasted that he could also take the artillery of the city of Youghal.

In June 1569, soon after Grenville's sailing for England, Fitzmaurice camped outside the walls of Waterford and demanded that Grenville's wife and Lady St Leger be given over to him, along with all the English and all prisoners; the citizens refused. His forces put local English farmers to the sword. As Cork ran low on provisions, the people of Youghal expected an attack at any minute. The rebellion continued, but Grenville remained in England. Grenville sided with the Earl of Arundel and the Duke of Norfolk in 1569 against the Queen's secretary. "Undeviatingly Protestant", he arrested the Catholic priest Cuthbert Mayne at the home of the Tregians in 1577. Mayne was martyred as a result.

During this period Grenville played a major role in the transformation of the small fishing port of Bideford in north Devon into a significant trading centre. A Charter had been granted to a former Richard Grenville in 1272, creating the Town's first Council. [Not quite true: the Charter was granted in 1272, the First Town Council was created in 1577]. In 1575 he created the Port of Bideford.

Grenville was never elected as Mayor of Bideford, preferring instead to support John Salterne in that role, but he was Lord of the Manor, a title held by the Grenville's since 1126 and finally ceded to the Town Council Richard Grenville created, in 1711. He was also High Sheriff of Cornwall in 1577.

Following a period of supporting Sir Walter Raleigh's venture in America (see below) he returned to Munster to arrange the estate granted him under the plantation of the province. Following the suppression of the Second Desmond Rebellion in 1583, he had purchased some 24,000 acres (97 km²) in Kinalmeaky and brought settlers over. His renewed efforts beginning in 1588 yielded little success, and Grenville returned to England late in 1590.

New World and the Spanish Armada:

In 1574 Grenville submitted a proposal to the Privy Council to take a single ship to plunder Spanish treasure ships in South America and from there to sail across the 'South Sea' (The Pacific Ocean) in the hope of finding a short cut to the Spice Islands. He was denied on the grounds that England was still using diplomacy with Spain. It was this plan that was eventually executed by Sir Francis Drake when he circumnavigated the world in 1577.

In 1585, Grenville was admiral of the seven-strong fleet that brought English settlers to establish a military colony on Roanoke Island, off the coast of modern North Carolina in North America. He was heavily criticised by Ralph Lane, General of the expedition, who referred to Grenville's "intolerable pride and unsatiable ambition". This description has remained of Grenville to this day but must be considered with the knowledge that Lane was involved in a bitter legal feud with Grenville at the time. On his return, Grenville took a Spanish Ship, the 'Santa Maria de Vincenze', which he later brought to Bideford to be converted into the 'Galleon Dudley'. The cannons from that Spanish ship are thought to be those erroneously labelled 'Armada cannons' in Bideford's Victoria Park.

In 1586 Grenville returned to Roanoke to find that the surviving colonists had shipped out with Drake. Grenville left 15 of his own men to defend Raleigh's New World territory. During his return to England, Grenville raided various towns in the Azores Islands. At about this time, a description was given of his behaviour while dining with Spanish captains:

"He would carouse three or four glasses of wine, and in a bravery take the glasses between his teeth and crash them in pieces and swallow them down, so that often the blood ran out of his mouth without any harm at all unto him." [This event is only found in the writings of Charles KINGSLEY in his novel 'Westward Ho!', and is therefore highly spurious at best!].

In 1587 he was asked by the Privy Council to organize the defences of Devon and Cornwall in preparation for the expected attack by the Spanish Armada the following year. In 1588, Grenville equipped seven ships at Bideford with supplies and more Colonists for Raleigh's 'Planters' Colony settled at Roanoke the previous year. However, a stay of shipping due to the impending arrival of the Spanish Armada meant that the fleet did not sail. Grenville led five of these ships to Plymouth to join the English defence and returned to Bideford where he provisioned the remaining two ships for Roanoke. A voyage that later turned back after being raided by the French. Later that year, Grenville was commissioned to keep watch at sea on the Western approaches to the Bristol Channel in case the Spanish Armada returned.

[The following section on the Death of Grenville has been written by Andy Powell, to replace the now-considered less accurate version on Wikipedia]:.

Final command and death:

In 1591, as part of a plan to strangle Spain's trade with its West Indian empire, England decided to blockade the Azores. Grenville was appointed vice admiral of the Revenge, one of Lord Howard of Effingham's ships, which was owned by the Queen. It was regarded as one of the finest in the fleet, recognition surely of Grenville's skills as a sea captain.

What happened during that fateful event has largely always been thought to follow closely Raleigh's report on the Battle of Flores, but we know now that this report was inaccurate. There exist a number of primary sources including a first-hand Spanish account from onboard Don Alonso de Bazan's flagship, and the testimony of the Captain of the 50-tonne Foresight (the only ship that came back to help the Revenge).

The Spanish fleet knew the English were at anchor on the northward side of the island of Flores and thus decided to split into two flotillas and circumnavigate the island to catch the English in a pincer movement. On sight of the Spanish, Lord Howard, having been caught unawares, fled.

Accounts state the English fleet had left many men on the island of Flores, some to seek water and others to gain some respite from a sickness that had swept through the fleet. In Sir Richard Hawkins' book Observations he records that 'Grenville would not leave his men ashore for the Spanish to take'.

The Spanish records on Sir Richard Grenville state: 'Almirante Ricardo de Campo Verde gran corsario y de mucha estimacion entrellos' (Admiral Richard Grenville, a great corsair and of great estimation among them). And the record on the Revenge after she was finally taken states, 'This Admiral Galleon was one of the best there were in England; they called her the Revenge. She was the flagship that carried Drake to Corunna'.

The first attempt to take the Revenge came from the San Felipe, which boarded her with nine or ten soldiers. In the following hand-to-hand combat, seven of them were killed. The ships then broke free. Aramburu's flagship then tried boarding the Revenge, but was repelled and, according to the Spaniard's own admission, badly damaged in the engagement. It was then the turn of the Ascencion under Don Antonio Manrique to try to board the Revenge but she, too, was beaten off.

The Spanish accounts go on to state that by this time, the Revenge had become unrigged and dismasted but was still fighting. She continued to fight and in the continuing battle sent the Vice Admiral Luis Cuitinho's ship, the La Serena, and the Ascencion to the bottom of the sea. These accounts also record that several other ships in their fleet were badly damaged in the engagement.

Grenville was wounded in the head by a Spanish marksman's musket shot just before midnight. By the following daybreak, the Revenge was almost out of powder, and was recorded as having no pikes left to repel boarders, and decks littered with the bodies of forty men. The ship was also slowly sinking from a catalogue of cannon and artillery shot.

It is at this point in the fight that Grenville is recorded by the subsequently repatriated mariners as commanding his men to arrange for the ship to be split asunder and sunk so she would not be taken. The crew said no, probably because they hoped to save themselves by handing over the Revenge to the Spanish as the prize they so evidently wanted. With his crew not prepared to sink the ship and having nothing left to fight with, Grenville had no choice but to surrender.

Grenville was taken onboard the San Pedro, the Spanish flagship. There his 'multiple wounds' were dressed and he was given a meal of his choosing. The Spanish account states that while Grenville sat at the table, 'Don Alonso would not see him yet all the rest of the captains and gentlemen did visit him to comfort him and to wonder at his courage and stout heart, for that he showed not any sign of faintness nor changing of colour.'

Sometime after Grenville's death, the Spanish admiral, Don Alonso, wrote, 'El Almirante de los mayors marineros y cosarios de inglaterra gran hereje y perseguidor de catholicos' (The admiral of the master mariners and corsairs of England [was] a great heretic and persecutor of the Catholics). He added, 'Mas la herida era grande y murio otro dia' (But his wound was grievous and in a day or two he died).

Grenville was buried at sea on the way to Terceira. The Revenge also sank en route. Some accounts state that the Revenge was left to dash against the cliffs of Terceira following a storm, but this is not recorded in the Spanish records.

The Spanish quoted their official losses as a hundred men and two captains; only two ships were declared lost, but many were subtly noted as having been severely damaged. English accounts suggest that up to fifty-three ships were involved but this is incorrect. There may have been many more ships in the Spanish fleet as a number did not engage in Don Alonso's attack, but what is certain is that a total of twenty-nine ships in two flotillas (of eighteen ships and eleven ships respectively) attacked the Revenge in that pincer movement around the island of Flores. [Coleccion Navarette XXV (Nos: 48, 49); A. de I., 54-1-34, Santo Domingo 1 18. 1 pliego, Cf. Document No. 10, ante].

The Battle of Flores had a consequence that rippled through the Spanish Empire for many years afterwards. The single-handed battle Grenville had fought not only severely hampered their expansion plans but also provided sufficient delay to the arrival of their treasure ships from the West Indies that they were caught in the worst storms for a century. Spanish maritime power never recovered.

In his book Considerations Touching a War with Spain, (imprinted 1629) Francis Bacon described Grenville's actions as "that memorable fight of an English ship called the Revenge, memorable I say even beyond credit and to the height of some heroic fable".

The Birthplace of Sir Richard GRENVILLE:

Firstly, it should be stated that there is no record anywhere of the Birth or Baptism of Sir Richard GRENVILLE.

However, his age and birth-year have been calculated from the note on his portrait hanging in the National Portrait Gallery in London, which states (in Latin) that the painting was made in 1571 when Sir Richard was aged 29 – ie: Richard must have been born in 1542.

His exact birth-date was recorded in the Inquisition Post Mortem of his grand-father Richard (generation 14), where it states that Richard (generation 16) was aged 8 on 15th June 1550.

The case for Sir Richard GRENVILLE (1542-1591) being born in Bideford, is as follows:

There are three possible places where his birth could have taken place in the GRENVILLE family homes at this time:

- Buckland Abbey
- Stowe House, Kilkhampton
- Bideford Manor

The Parish Baptism Registers for Buckland Monachorum (which includes Buckland Abbey) only survive back to 1552, although the Marriage and Burial Registers survive back to 1538 when the law required Parish incumbents to record all Baptisms, Marriages and Burials performed in the parish. We are therefore unable to consult Baptism Registers for the period around 1542.

The Parish Baptism Registers for Kilkhampton survive fully back to 1539. These have been searched for a baptism entry for Richard GRENVILLE in or shortly after 1542 – none was recorded there.

The Parish Baptism Registers for Bideford only survive fully back to 1561, so do not survive for the period in question.

Sir Richard GRENVILLE's father Roger GRENVILLE (generation 15) was married to Thomazine COLE, and had three children:

- Charles, born c.1541, died 1544
- Richard, born 1542, died 1591
- John, born 1545, died: unknown (presumed in infancy as there is no further mention of him)

There were no known earlier children, so Roger and Thomazine probably married just prior to the birth of Charles around 1541. There would probably have been subsequent children, but Roger was killed in 1545.

There is no surviving record of their marriage. However, Parish Registers survive for both Buckland Monachorum and Kilkhampton for the period from 1538 onwards, and no marriage is recorded in either of these. So Roger must have married Thomazine either in her home parish, or in Bideford.

Roger GRENVILLE died in 1545, in the sinking of the 'Mary Rose' whilst leading an attack on the French in the Solent on 19th July. His position on board the vessel was 'Captain', but whether he was captain of the vessel or captain of the marines serving on board the vessel is not clear. Either way, Roger must have had a sound knowledge of ships, and could not have reached that position without a lifetime's background of being on-board a variety of vessels. Kilkhampton is unlikely to have provided such opportunities for a young man, but the established port of Bideford would have been ideal for giving him this background knowledge and experience.

The GRENVILLE family bought Buckland Abbey in 1541. The Abbey had recently been dissolved by Henry VIII and at that time it was a monastic building not a family home, so Richard GREYNFELD (generation 14) commenced work converting it to suit his tastes. Much work was done, and it was his grand-son Richard (generation 16) who finally completed the work, with much money being spent on it in 1576, transforming it into mansion (this date being on the fire-place frieze in the great hall).

Regarding the purchase of Buckland Abbey, we have the following sources:

(a) In 1541 'in consideration of the good, true and faithful service which our well-beloved servant Richard GREYNFELD ... heretofore done to us' [the King] sold him Buckland Abbey for £233.3s.4d and an annual fee of £2.6s.4½d to the Court of Augmentations. [Guide to Buckland Abbey by Crispin GILL, page 44, published by the City of Plymouth 1951].

(b) The whole demesne was granted by Henry VIII to Sir Richard GRENVILLE of Bideford, in capite, for the twentieth part of a knight's fee. [The Family and Heirs of Sir Francis DRAKE, by Lady DRAKE, 1911, page 56].

(c) GRENVILLE bought the reversion to Buckland Abbey in Devonshire, for which on 24th May 1541, he paid the sum of £233.3s.4d. [Sir Richard GRENVILLE of the Revenge, by A I ROWSE, 1937, page 36. L. and P., XV1, no. 878 (68)].

(d) To Sir Richard GRENVILLE of Bideford, 26th May 1541, the site, church, etc and demesne of Buckland Abbey (L.P. xvi 429: the grant also included some Cornish property). m.3 The site and demesne of Buckland Abbey: Farm of the site with orchards, gardens, meadows, etc, called Calves parke and Barne parke, 5 ac; Dedeham, 70 ac; Quarry Park, 11 ac; Conyger, 26 ac; Wyndemyll parke, 8 ac; Long parke, 17 ac, together with a small meadow adjoining; Longlandes, 60 ac; Vyntens, 18 ac; Oxenham, 4 ac; Sowthefelde 40 ac; Penmarshe parke, 5 ac; Okewell, 2½ ac; Hyer Bickeham and Lower Bickeham, 110 ac; arable land called Hayleball, 60 ac; Long parke, 7 ac; Ruggemyll parke, 2½ ac; meadows called Cawsey mede, 1 ac; Shepewaishe, 1½ ac; pastures, 120 ac; and woods called Halieball wood, £23 3s 5d. Certified by Mathew COLTHURST. (LM) 'Nota lucu' Supervis; boscorum pro boscis ibidem'.

Immediately after the surrender of the Abbey in the Spring of 1539 ARUNDELL had farmed the site and demesne to George POLLARD of London at a rent of £23.3s.5d (Receivers Accounts 1538-9) and in the following December this was formally confirmed by the Crown for 21 years (A.O. Misc Book 212, fo.33). It is odd that the auditor does not cite POLLARD's lease but it is mentioned in the letters patent. At what date he was bought out by the GRENVILLEs is not known, and in fact there is no proof that POLLARD's lease did not run its full term. Sir Richard GRENVILLE paid £130 of the purchase money on 12th May 1542, and £102.7s.7d on 24th June following (A.O. Misc Book 336, fos. 8, 15) but the remaining 15s.9d was still unpaid at least as late as 1551 (A.O. Treas. Accts 7, m. 62) and in 1554 his heirs were five years – ie: £11.11s.8d – in arrears with the rent reserved to the Crown (R.A. 1554-4).

A.O. = PRO Exchequer Augmentation Office.

It is highly unlikely that the Abbey would have been suitable accommodation for Roger's (generation 15) expectant wife, and for her to give birth there to son Richard in June of 1542. From the above, we can also see that although the purchase was made on 26th May 1541, no money changed hands until 12th May 1542 (first installment), and 24th June 1542 (second installment). Buckland Abbey cannot have been a family home until after the money changed hands and refurbishment works had been undertaken. However, we do know that by 1544 the family appear to be staying there, as their first-born son Charles (who sadly died young) was buried in Buckland Monachorum on 28th August 1544 [recorded in Parish Register].

The archives of Buckland Abbey have no record of the family living there at that time, and it is believed that the buildings in the early days of the GRENVILLE ownership were just used as a hunting lodge.

There was a further son John (both birth and death unrecorded) who is believed to have died in infancy, as there is only mention of Richard in the will of his grandfather Richard GREYNFELDE who wrote his will shortly after his son Roger's death on the 'Mary Rose' in 1545. Had John been alive in 1545, he would almost certainly have merited a mention. He doesn't appear in the Buckland records, so it is therefore most likely that the family moved back to Bideford, and John was born and died there.

The GRENVILLE manor house at Bideford would have been big enough for Sir Roger GRENVILLE and his small family between his marriage around 1540, and his death in 1545. It is unlikely that they were living at Stowe, as Roger's father Richard was still alive, and known to be in residence there. He made codicils to his will, dated at Stowe: 3rd January, 10th March, and 15th of March 1549/50, the last being just three days before his death. [For transcript of the Will of Richard GREYNFELDE (generation 14) who died at Stowe on 18th March 1549/50, see appendix 4].

After the death of Roger GRENVILLE in 1545, his wife Thomazine re-married to Thomas ARUNDELL, and moved to his estate at Clifton Arundell in Cornwall, where her only surviving son (Sir) Richard GRENVILLE was raised.

In 1565 Sir Richard GRENVILLE (generation 16) married Mary St Leger from Annery in the parish of Monkleigh. There is no record of their marriage, and the Marriage Registers for both Bideford and Monkleigh survive for this date, but given the noble connections of these two families, this couple could have married almost anywhere by special licence.

In later life, Sir Richard spends his time moving between Buckland, Stowe and Bideford. Bideford appears to be an administrative office during the period 1563 to 1585. Then from late 1585 there is a permanent shift of the GRENVILLE family to Bideford, until Richard's son Bernard appears at Stowe shortly after his marriage at Kilkhampton on 10th July 1592.

Interim Conclusion

The above evidence suggests no other option, except that Sir Richard GRENVILLE was born in the family home in Bideford on 15th June 1542

1585: Sir Richard GRENVILLE builds a new house at Bideford:

We know that at the time of Sir Richard GRENVILLE's first voyage to set up a colony in America (1585), he was also engaged in constructing a new house for himself and his family in Bideford.

[Examination of Pedro Diaz; Havana, 21 March 1589 - Spanish Archives 'Coleccion Navarette']

By 1585, Richard had seven surviving children that we know of, so would have needed a substantial residence. Only two of these were male children, and they are the only of his children mentioned in his will/indenture written in the same year, but we also know that he had five daughters, one of which (Rebecca) died young and was buried at Bideford in 1589. There would have been many servants the quantity of which are unknown, but we do know that Sir Richard GRENVILLE's widow Mary, virtually living alone at the end of her life, mentions three servants in her will, so the number of servants for a large family must have been considerable.

During Sir Richard's voyage of 1585, he captured a Spanish vessel called the 'Santa Maria de Vincenze' at Bermuda on his way back to England. Such 'privateering' was permitted, and indeed encouraged by the Monarch, and the captains who captured such vessels were allowed to keep the proceeds from anything they captured. However, GRENVILLE was not known to have engaged in privateering – the Santa Maria simply being in the wrong place at the wrong time, and GRENVILLE took advantage of the situation in order to help pay for his voyage. In the case of the 'Santa Maria de Vincenze' we know that she was valued at £50,000, which in today's terms would have been something over £8 million. Sir Richard therefore had plenty of money at this time, and investing this in a grand house would have been a sensible move.

On board during Sir Richard GRENVILLE's voyage back home to Bideford in 1585, was a captured Spanish Captain called Pedro DIAZ, and a quantity of other captured Spanish sailors. In a later deposition made to the Spanish authorities, Pedro DIAZ describes his time as a prisoner being brought to Bideford. He also describes being made to help build GRENVILLE's house at Bideford. The Calendar of Spanish state papers also says that GRENVILLE held Spanish prisoners as slaves, and that they were made to carry stones on their backs all day for a building operation of GRENVILLE's. This does appear to be another reference to the construction of GRENVILLE's new house at Bideford. Pedro DIAZ was able to escape in 1588, and in 1589 wrote this above account about his incapacitation at Bideford.

[Examination of Pedro Diaz; Havana, 21 March 1589 - Spanish Archives 'Coleccion Navarette']

At this time Mary GRENVILLE (nee St LEGER), would probably also have wanted to be nearer her brother and troubled father at Annery, so since Stowe was not favoured and Buckland Abbey had been sold, a new home at Bideford would have been most desirable.

1586: Sir Richard GRENVILLE was based in Bideford in this year, and was obviously a person of extended local renown, both in terms of his name and his foreign explorations, as Adam Wyatt the Town Clerk of neighbouring Barnstaple records. "On 16th April 1586, Sir Richard GREYNVYLLLE sailed ('out of Barnstaple' crossed out) over the Barr with his flee boat [fly boat] and friget." This was the voyage to take supplies to the colony in Virginia established the previous year. Later on that same year, the Barnstaple Chronicle states that "In December, Sir Richard GREYNFILD came home bringing a prise with him laden with sugar ginger and hyds." It was on this return voyage that GRENVILLE acquired more Spanish prisoners from the Azores, which it is believed he used to help in the building operations for his new house at Bideford.

We also know that Sir Richard GRENVILLE was resident in Bideford in 1586, as a letter written by him there has survived:..

Sir Richard Grenvile to Dr Julies Caesar (in London):

“Good Mr Doctor, I do understonde by my servaunt and others how troublesome come causes which ptely concerne me have bene unto you, and with all your good will professed towards me etc

... thus having laid open the estate of this cause unto you as to him who I am pswaded is my very good frende in ony my iuste accons, assuring you that I will not be unmindfull of your courtesies towarde me, with my very hartie Comendacons I praing you to pdon my boldness with you, I comitte you to the protection of the almightie.

Bedyforde this 27 of February 1586.

Your assured loving frend

R. Greynvile”

[British Museum Lansdown Manuscripts. Ref: 158, fol.48 & 49].

A further letter of 1589, was written from GRENVILLE’s house at Bideford...

Sir Richard Grenvile to Dr Julies Caesar:

“Good Mr Doctor, I muste nowe crave yow to stande frendlye for my kynesmanm that made seasure on the shippe and wynes at Padstow, for that theree are others which ptend right unto it etc yow shall alwayes fynde me Juste to the most of my power. And so I beseech god for ever to prosper yow.

At my howse in Bediford this 19th of Maye 1589.

Your assured poore frend

R. Greynvile”

[British Museum Lansdown Manuscripts. Ref: 143, fol.264 & 265v].

Given the rising status of Sir Richard GRENVILLE, and his need for a large imposing residence, the old Manor House would have been too small by this time, and not able to give him the elevated status of someone undertaking voyages to settle new lands in the name of the Queen. He must have been resident there by February 1587 (the ‘February 1586’ date above would be February 1587 using today’s Gregorian calendar – New Year’s Day prior to 1752 was on 25th March), so these letters were written from his new residence, and he was proud to show it.

We know that there were two separate houses belonging to the GRENVILLEs, generally known as ‘(New) Place House’ and ‘Old Place House’. We also know that GRENVILLE had servants, and accommodation would be needed for these. In April 1589, the Bideford Burial Registers report the burial of ‘Lawrence, servant of Sir Richard GREYNVILLE Knight’. It is interesting to speculate that as this servant had no last name, that he might be an imported servant (probably black) who was named by GRENVILLE but would not have had a last name. We know that black servants had appeared in Barnstaple by this date. In 1588, Queen Elizabeth granted licences to permit trading to the coast of Guinea in West Africa, and this included Richard DODDERIDGE from Barnstaple. In the Barnstaple registers there are a number of baptisms or burials for a ‘nyger’ or ‘nigor’ in the 1590s. Sadly, the native American (Rawley) who Sir Richard brought back to Bideford in 1588, was also buried in April 1589, two days before Lawrence. These entries are possibly the first confirmed records we have of immigrant people being buried in this country.

Interim Conclusion:

The Old Manor (known as the ‘Old Place’) was on the site of numbers 1, 2, and 3 Bridge Street, and probably other additional adjacent land besides.

The New House of Sir Richard GRENVILLE (known as the ‘New Place’) was constructed on Bideford Quay in 1585.

1670s:

The 1st EARL OF BATH (in the 3rd re-awardment of this title) was Sir John GREVILLE, 1628-1701 (generation 19), who was given this newly created title in 1661, after his services in helping the restoration of Charles II to the throne of England. As such, he was a direct descendant of the owners of both Old Place House and New Place House, and it appears that he was still able to transfer land belonging to the Old Place House in 1670.

A reference has been found* stating that the EARL OF BATH purchased a house and garden in Maidenstreet in 1670, and formed a new road, which we today know as Buttgarden Street. At the same time though, he is also recorded as giving "a plot of the garden of the old Place House for enlarging the churchyard on the north side thereof". Whether this land was ever used for burials, or was eventually used to construct the properties which now appear in this vicinity, is unknown.

[*Inkerman Rogers, Concise History of Bideford]

The 1672 Church Rates (see main Statement of Significance Report for No.1 Bridge Street for details), state that the owners of 'Place House', situated on Bideford Quay, are to pay 4d in rates. It also states that a Mr John HILL is to pay 2d in rates for the 'Old Place House' situated next to the Churchyard.

The rating value for other houses in Bridge Street was 1d, so being charged 2d does indicate that this was a significant property. John HILL is known to have been Town Clerk at this time, and his 'Mr' status denotes him as gentry, and gives him status.

Having a rating value of 4d for the other property on the Quay shows that this was a grand dwelling, although the name of the person responsible for it at that time, was sadly not recorded.

This map from 1842 shows a regimeted boundary structure for the properties in question.

Where was GRENVILLE's house on The Quay?

The location of GRENVILLE's Quay House has long been the subject of speculation and research.

In 1922, a correspondent writing in the North Devon Journal stated that Rev. GRANVILLE investigated a claim that the Old Castle Inn in Allhalland Street was formerly GRENVILLE's house, but that he was unable to find any proof of this. [ref: North Devon Journal: 17th August 1922, page 6, col.a].

In 1929, R Pearse Chope suggested that Place House was on the site of the Bideford Gas and Coke Company Building [No.8], where 'a handsome fireplace with the Grenville Arms is still preserved.' [ref: Devon Notes & Queries: Vol.15, page 105 (1929)].

Following further investigation and analysis, it is concluded that there are elements of truth in both the above statements, but that neither is completely correct.

No.8 The Quay (a building with an Art Deco frontage, formerly the showrooms of the Bideford Gas and Coke Company), does indeed contain an impressive plaster fireplace overmantel, attributed to, and supposedly depicting Sir Bevil GRENVILLE.

The listing description of this building is as follows:

No.8 The Quay. Public House, now shop and offices. Late C19, refronted probably in 1930s; incorporates important C17 detail from house formerly on the site. Solid rendered front. Steeply-pitched hipped slate roof. Rendered chimney on each side-wall. 3 storeys; 3-window range. Ground storey altered, but upper storeys retain simple Art Deco design with metal windows and large stepped projection to centre of upper floor.

INTERIOR: first-floor front room contains an early/mid C17 plaster overmantel with the Grenville arms and a high-relief figure, popularly believed to be Sir Bevil Grenville (died 1643), whose town house is said to have occupied this site. The 1973 list description refers to a date of 1643 on the overmantel, but this does not seem to have been noticed by local historians commenting on the house. For part of C19 this was the Three Tuns Inn.

This photograph from 1863, clearly shows the Three Tuns Inn (No.8), adjacent to the Kings Arms (No.7, which still exists) on Bideford Quay.

The building which occupies the site of No.8 today, is a replacement building, and therefore this overmantle must have been placed there in more recent times. There is no evidence to suggest that it came from the previous building on the site of No.8 (ie: the one depicted above), although in Muriel Goaman's Book on Bideford, she says that this was "covered by panelling for many years after the house became the Three Tuns Inn". However, an overmantle of this size would have originally have been positioned so the soffit was about 2.0m above floor level. The floor-to-ceiling heights in the Three Tuns would have been sufficient to accommodate such an extravagant feature.

Adjacent to the overmantle were 2 additional features not mentioned in the Listing Description.

These were 2 doors and frames flanking the fireplace and positioned at angles to contain cupboards.

They are believed to be genuine, and date from the early 17th century, or possibly late 16th century.

Each of these doors has different pairs of frame-stops, elaborately carved. The doors and frames have again been resited here from another building, probably the same one as the overmantle.

Further research is continuing to try and date these features, and to determine their origin.

6 The Quay:

Another building suggested as being the Quay House of the GRENVILLEs, is the 'Rose of Torridge' building at No.6 The Quay. Below we can see it in 1863, signed as the 'Newfoundland Inn'.

This building is undoubtedly ancient, and the sunken floor shows that the surface of the Quay would originally have been about 2'0" lower in order to suit the ground floor level of this structure. Heresay evidence reports that there are a mass of timber piles driven into the mud underneath this building, forming its foundations.

This painting from c.1760 shows the whole Quayside frontage of this part of Bideford. No.6 is the 3-gabled building just right of centre.

To the right of No.6 is: Conduit Lane, followed by the Kings Arms public house.

To the left of No.6 is a 6-gabled building, followed by the Grammar School (now Bridge Buildings).

An inspection was carried out of No.6 in order to determine if there were historic details which might date back to 1585. Sadly none were discovered, although decorative door-frame stops and the joints of roof-timbers did suggest a date of around the 1630s. No other significant dateable features were able to be discovered. Given the lack of dateable features from the Elizabethan period, and the evidence of the development of Bideford Quay at this time, this seems to preclude this building from further investigation.

For information: the Listing Description of this building is recorded as follows:

House, now restaurant and offices. Early or mid C17 (possibly a remodelling of an earlier structure), altered in C19 and with C20 addition at rear. Solid rendered walls (some stone rubble visible internally in ground-storey left side-wall and adjacent rear wall); front of third storey may be timber-framed. Pantiled roofs; there were probably 3 roofing-spans originally lying at right-angles to the quay, but the right-hand span appears to have been replaced by a flat roof. No chimneys.

Double-depth plan, 3 rooms wide. 3 storeys; 3-window range, the top storey jettied and finished with 3 triangular gablets corresponding to the original roofing-spans behind. The ground and second storeys have a pilaster at each end; these may be a C19 addition, but it could be that they are the ends of the side-walls, the timber-framed front wall between them having been rebuilt in brick. At the top of each pilaster, under the jetty, is a large foliated corbel, probably C19. Ground storey has late C19 or early C20 canted display window at each end.

Entrance in centre flanked by piers with moulded capitals; 2 angled doors recessed within a lobby, each with a solid moulded panel at the bottom and a glazed upper part with margin-panes. Continuous entablature above both display windows and entrance.

In second storey 3 wooden mid C19 canted bay windows with sashes; 4-paned sashes in centre, 2-paned ones at the sides, all with margin-panes. Third storey has mid or late C20 three-light wooden casement windows with transom-lights.

Right side-wall (visible from public alley) has C20 wooden casement windows in upper storeys, those in second storey with glazing-bars. 2 short ground-storey window with ogee-moulded wooden mullions, each of 4 lights. The left-hand window has the 3 original centre mullions and the left end-mullion, but the remainder, including both sill and lintel, are C20 replicas; the right-hand window is in a similar condition, except that the original lintel with pegged joints survives.

At the right-hand end, just beyond the back of the original building, is a square-headed C17 door-frame with ovolo and hollow mouldings, these finished at the bottom with large vase-stops; the feet of the jambs have been cut off and replaced in replica.

INTERIOR: little original work can now be seen, and there are several C20 beams and joists, together with some imitation panelling. The left-hand second-storey front room has an original ovolo-moulded ceiling-beam with no visible stops and a rear square-headed door-frame, also with ovolo mouldings and elaborated scroll-stops; adjoining it in the lobby outside is a matching door-frame with C20 door opening into the left-hand rear room. The left-hand roof-span has old trusses with collar-beams and purlins; middle roof-span not accessible. 2 recesses in the left side-wall may be blocked windows, suggesting perhaps that the building was originally free-standing.

Although altered, this building is a type of high-class early post-medieval town house that is rare in Devon. It is likely to contain original fireplaces, partitions (possibly panelled) and door-frames at present concealed by later plastering and boarding. WH

Rogers has suggested that this building was erected in 1633 at the rear end of a garden belonging to a house in Allhalland Street. In 1842 Wood's plan shows it as 3 separate properties marked 'Western' but 20 years later (before 1864) it had become the Newfoundland Inn. It was subsequently renamed The Old Ship Tavern. Old photographs show it with a very high parapet, wholly concealing the roof-gables.

In this description we have an unsubstantiated reference that this building was constructed in 1633, which matches the dateable features noted during our inspection of this building. Given the comment in the above description about blocked-up windows in the south-facing (left-hand side) wall, and that the 1760 image shows this building to be mostly free-standing, it would appear that this building retains its original size, and is therefore not large enough to be GRENVILLE's mansion.

1 & 2 The Quay:

At the far left-hand end of this quayside row of buildings, adjoining Bridge Street, currently sits 'Bridge Buildings'. These were constructed in 1882.

Prior to that, a Grammar School stood on the site. This was known to have been built in 1657.

In front of the Grammar School stands a shop, window screened off, probably waiting for demolition.

We have little knowledge of what occupied this site prior to 1657. What we do know is:..

a) There are records of a Chapel situated at the western end of Bideford Bridge. The exact site of this Chapel is unknown, but we know it was dedicated to All Hallows, from which Allhalland Street got its name. This Chapel may have occupied part of the site of Numbers 1 & 2 The Quay.

b) Only one known painting exists showing this site prior to 1657 – see below:

Looking over the shoulder of Bideford mayor John STRANGE, we can see Bideford Bridge on the left. In the foreground are some vessels on the Torr ridge, standing in front of a narrow wharf-frontage. (Bideford Quay was not extended across the front of these buildings until 1663).

The buildings at the end of Bideford Bridge are a couple of small properties, one of which may even depict All Hallows Chapel.

But it is the 6-gabled building in the centre which is significant in this picture. This is a huge building, which must have been built to impress, and which we know was in existence around 1642.

The same building is seen here in this 1760 picture by a Mr. Jewell.

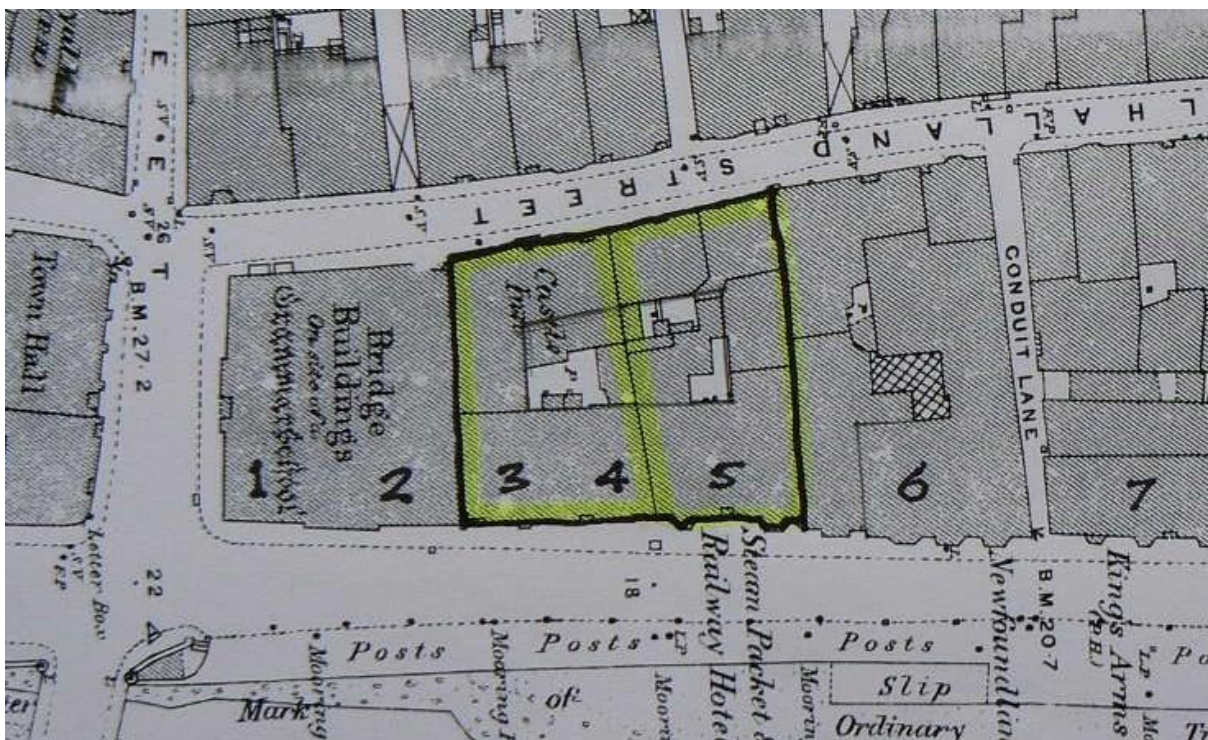

3-5 The Quay:

The colonnaded lower level, and two further upper stories of this building can easily be seen in the above paintings. Plus a series of gabled ends on the roof, which make it look most ostentatious. This is a building built for show.

The 1760 painting does not show it in such great detail, but it is sufficient to identify it as the same structure, and that it still existed in 1760.

What rich person would have been able to build such a grand quay-side building like this, prior to 1640? We can speculate about this being the house that Sir Richard GRENVILLE built in 1585, however looking at all the other sites in this area of Bideford, we must come to the conclusion that this building is the only viable possibility.

This was a town mansion befitting a Knight, a wealthy adventurer & explorer, and friend of Queen Elizabeth.

Looking at the 1886 ground-plan of the space which this building would have occupied (although the buildings shown here are replacements, with the possible exception of No.5) we can make out a building block which would have extended all the way back to Allhalland Street, and which would have had a courtyard in the middle. Road access would have been from Allhalland Street with an archway, through which carriages and horses could pass. No doubt stables and cellars occupied the ground floor levels.

The 'Castle Inn' occupied the rear part of this site. This was the building which Rev. GRANVILLE investigated in 1895 as being rumoured to be the house of Sir Richard GRENVILLE, but that he found no direct evidence. It appears that he may have been partly right.

There is also hearsay evidence that a wall painting existed above a fireplace in the Castle Inn, which was said to depict 'Grenville's colony on Roanoke'. This early 20th century reference has yet to be verified.

It is believed that the Castle Inn and all the other buildings which formerly occupied this site have since been demolished and replaced. Therefore any surviving structure which can be attributed to Sir Richard GRENVILLE has probably been lost forever. Unless you count the artifacts which appear in other buildings such as No.8 The Quay, which may have come from this mansion.

The 'mansion house' built by Sir Richard GRENVILLE may possibly just have survived into the age of photography. On the left we have a building marked 'Hotel' (actually the Steam Packet and Railway Hotel). This is the right-hand half of Numbers 3-5 The Quay.

If this is the same building, then gone are the gables, and the lower colonnade, and the façade has been refaced and bay windows added. But underneath it may have lain the GRENVILLE house.

Looking at this slightly later photograph above – to the left of the Steam Packet and Railway Hotel stands next to a more modern building. However the Hotel has a sunken ground floor level, just like other early buildings in this row. The slightly twisted nature of the façade, suggests an underlying timber structure which has warped with age. We also have a suggestion of 3 hipped ends on the roof – perhaps a remnant of the gables known to have adorned the building here. There is a strong case for this being a remnant of GRENVILLE’s mansion. It is thought that this building survived until being demolished in 1937.

Demolition of the Steam Packet Hotel in 1937.

We know from the Will of Sir Bevill GRENVILLE written in 1639 that he was living at Stowe in Cornwall, although the ‘Burrough and Manor of Bideford’ was still on the top of his portfolio of properties, so it would appear that the GRENVILLE properties were still in his hands at this time. Whether this included the Quayside Mansion, is not stated. This may have been sold off prior to 1639, Sir Bevill having no need for a grand river-front property. Or it may have been sold off after Sir Bevill’s death in 1643 (the same year as the death of Ursula GRENVILLE, un-married daughter of Sir Richard, who was still believed to have been living here). Either way, we have evidence that by the 1670s, this building was no longer in GRENVILLE ownership.

[For a full transcript of the Will of Sir Bevill GRENVILLE, see Appendix 14].

Interim conclusion:

1 to 3 Bridge Street has been shown to be the site of the original manor house of the GRENVILLE family, and therefore is a significant site in Bideford's history, and the location of the birth-place of Sir Richard GRENVILLE himself.

Later references in GRENVILLE and other documents, which refer to the 'Burrough, Manor, or Barton' of Bideford are believed to centre on the Bridge Street properties – these being the original 'Manor' – and not the grand (now sold-off) Quay-front house, which was only ever known as 'Place House' [See Appendix 1 for an assessment of the terminology of these terms in this context].

The Overmantle:

Returning to the question of the GRENVILLE overmantle found in No.8 The Quay...

This building has an Art-Deco facade, and the Listing Description suggests that the building is:

“Late C19, refronted probably in 1930s; incorporates important C17 detail from house formerly on the site.”

In 1929, W Pearse Chope suggested that:

“Place House was on the site of the Bideford Gas and Coke Company Building [No.8], where ‘a handsome fireplace with the Grenville Arms is still preserved.’”

In about 1935, William Henry Rogers ‘Notes on Bideford’ page 77, says that:

“In the Board Room of the Gas Company’s office is a plaster mantelpiece and frieze. In the centre is a full-length figure of Sir Bevil GRENVILLE with the GRENVILLE arms on either side. This mantelpiece was discovered when the house, then the Three Tuns Tavern was dismantled and re-edified by the Gas Company. The house was Sir Bevil’s Town House, and was known as ‘New Place’ to distinguish it from ‘Old Place’, the original manor house at the west end of the Bridge.”

It appears that the overmantle had already been in its current location for quite some time in 1929. The insertion of this feature would therefore pre-date the Art-Deco façade, but for how long had it been there.

It is not mentioned in Rev. GRANVILLE’s book on the GRENVILLE family, published in 1895 – a serious omission if this architectural feature had been visible and known-about at that time. We can deduce that it was discovered sometime between 1895 and 1929. This house is also not believed to be the ancient house belonging to the GRENVILLEs, and we can also demonstrate that this feature cannot have been original in the ‘Three Tuns’ building:.

When viewed in the 1863 photograph, the building at No.8 has 3 floor levels which line through with the King’s Arms next door.

A modern view of the Quay Frontage shows that the present building at No.8 has much greater floor-to-floor heights, so must have been completely re-built since 1863.

The overmantle is clearly not in its original location, for the following reasons:

- It dates from the 17th century, but it is situated in a building constructed in the early 20th century, however there is hearsay evidence that it was previously in the Three Tuns Tavern formerly on this site.
- It is at the wrong height for an overmantle – it would have originally have been much higher.

As has been previously stated, the floor-to-ceiling heights in the Three Tuns Tavern formerly on this site, would have been insufficient to accommodate an overmantle of this quality, at its originally intended height.

In every publication concerning this overmantle, it has been attributed to Sir Bevil GRENVILLE (who died in 1643), and is sometimes said to have been re-sited in the Town House belonging to him, formerly on this site. Perhaps it came from the Quay Mansion of Sir Richard GRENVILLE, constructed in 1585, but no direct evidence has been found of this, and this is just speculation. Indeed we now have evidence to the contrary:..

The design of the overmantle has been examined by Peter HOOD (a leading authority on the English Civil War, historical consultant to Bideford 500 Heritage Group, and mastermind behind Torrington 1646. He has a large network of enthusiasts who earn a living making civil war paraphernalia, and is fastidious about detail). Mr HOOD has stated that the coat which the man on the overmantle is wearing is called a 'Dutchcoat'. They originated from the Netherlands before the Civil War but were originally much shorter, almost like a waistcoat. It was only after the Restoration that a new design emerged of a much longer three-quarter length. This is known as the 'Jacobean Dutchcoat', and is what we see the figure wearing in this overmantle. The shoes depicted here, are also of a fashion from a period later than 1660.

Therefore, the image on this fireplace cannot have been made until after the restoration of the monarchy (1660). Its attribution in numerous sources to Sir Bevill GRENVILLE therefore appears to have been in error, and has been compounded by all who have subsequently written about this.

No evidence as to the origin of this overmantle has ever been suggested, apart from speculation that it was from a house on the same site. Logically though, we certainly have an item which was created by the GRENVILLE family (it has their Coat of Arms on it), and if so, then there are limited places where this could have come from:..

- (a) Old Place House, Bridge Street
- (b) New Place House, The Quay
- (c) Buckland Abbey
- (d) Stowe House, Kilkhampton

Old Place House (a) in Bridge Street, is known to have been reconstructed in the 1630s, but is not grand enough for such a feature. Neither are there any fireplaces of sufficient width or height to accommodate an overmantle of this size. The building also appears to have left GRENVILLE ownership sometime in the 1660s.

New Place House (b) left the GRENVILLE family ownership some time before or during the Civil War, and could therefore not have been home to this overmantle.

Buckland Abbey (c) was sold by the GRENVILLE family in 1580, so a feature created in the 1660s could not have been made here.

The leaves us with (d): Stowe House near Kilkhampton.

Known to be a country seat of the GRENVILLEs since at least the 1300s, the building at Stowe had become draughty and out-dated by the 1670s. A new house was built there between 1676 & 1679 in the latest style, designed & built by Thomas FITCH. The old mediaeval manor was then demolished.

Having had all his debts cleared by Charles II, John GRENVILLE showed his renewed status by building a grand mansion for himself at Stowe, as shown in this contemporary engraving. The building was completed by 1680, and it seems highly likely that the GRENVILLE overmantle was created for this house.

After the death of the last direct GRENVILLE descendant in 1711, Stowe House became redundant, and was not wanted by the female GRENVILLE descendants who had inherited this through the line of their now-deceased cousins. In 1739, the unwanted house had become a financial burden to maintain and so was demolished and all the contents sold off.

“The expense of supporting the house was great, the mason, the hellier, the carpenter, the painter & other artificers had so much annually for keeping it in repair, they took their money and neglected the house, the continual expense was tiresome. At last it was determined to take it down, and an undertaker, as I have been informed, purchased all the materials as they stood for about £2000.”

[taken from ‘Excursions of William BORLASE’ in Royal Institution of Cornwall – he visited Kilkhampton on 17th June 1757]

Many items from the house were used in the Guildhall at South Molton, as described in their accounts below:

“The house (Stowe) was famous, and it would be if we heard today that Blenheim was to be pulled down. The committee of five had an eye for a bargain, and as recorded in detail, it appointed one of its members Joshua BAWDEN to attend the sale, and but suitable materials for the new Guildhall. Joshua was a Magistrate and a man of repute in the community. He kept a particular account of his transactions noting on July 10th [1739]:

Things bought at Stowe in Cornwall by Joshua BAWDEN by ye order of the Mayor and Burgess’. The demolition sale must have taken place at the end of June or early in July, for BAWDEN came back to South Molton to make up his accounts before returning to Stowe on August 8th and again on the 14th to organise the carriage of materials. Among many things that he bought are a number which we can identify in the Guildhall today: Ladies fine bed-chamber and planching £35 (the chimney piece is comparatively simple, ornamented with the carved flowers and fruit), nine sash windows 10s.6d and two at 11s.6d, No.27 ye wincott without ye chimney and door casings £11.13s, seven pairs of wincott window shutters 8s.0d, 172 rustic quoins at 1s (total £8.12s), four Corinthian capitals and pilasters £2.2s, ye casing and ornament of three windows £1.11s.6d, three architraves with pediments for doors, and twenty seven yards of wincott in the lobby £2.2s, a carved cornish [cornice] and triumph of King Charles II £7.7s, two eight-panel doors £1.1s. (ms expenses of building, the present Town Hall, archives the Borough of South Molton). These things with much else were carted the six miles from Stowe to Bude, shipped up the coast via the River Taw to Barnstaple, and thence carted to South Molton. Payments are recorded to tradesmen from the Town who went over to Stowe, for the hire and keep of horses and of oxen, to 'ye Custom House officer for permit, 10s.6d', to 'Mr COAT's Captain for his care 5s', 'to ye sailors in ale 2s', and for BAWDEN's own travelling and lodging expenses. The purchase and carriage of the materials from Stowe cost £171.8s.3d.

The new Guildhall was started in 1740, and by the time it was finished in 1743, it had cost just of £1000. The nine sash windows are still there, the 172 rustic quoins for the arcade and the front of the building, and the full Corinthian capitals and pilasters frame the niche in which is the bust of Hugh SQUIER a great benefactor of the town. Beneath the niche are the Borough Arms, flanked by curving swags of fruit and flowers which must surely be those which flanked the GRENVILLE Arms on the pediment of Stowe. The keystone of the arches in the arcade, and perhaps also of the windows of the ground floor are certainly from Stowe. Grotesque masks were much used in the 19th century – there are many such keystones elsewhere in South Molton – but those of the late 17th century are clearly distinguishable in character. One such mask survives at Stowe, above the GRENVILLE Arms over the front door of the farmhouse.

There is no record in the Borough accounts of the balustrade round the roof having come from Stowe, but there was such a balustrade on the east front round the basement area, and it seems likely that this was the 'parapett' which the accounts record as being erected on the Guildhall in Aug 1741."

Charles HENDERSON, in his papers now in this Institution, noted that Denys WADDON of Tonacombe, that enchanting little 15th century house in the adjoining parish of Morwenstow, had acted as agent for the GRENVILLE family. In WADDON's Letter Book (then at Penstowe) he recorded a "paper showing plan of bricks sold at Stowe arranged in heaps, c.1750. Note: 10,000 bricks sold to John HEAD to build a cottage in Robers Church Wood'. No doubt it took years to dispose of the materials. Some of them were bought by the Churchwardens of Kilkhampton, whose accounts record payments for carrying '24 seams of flooring stones from Stowe' (1738) '36 foot of coping stone at 6d per foot' (1739), and '80 foot of stone at 6d, 500 bricks at 5s.6d, timber at 2s.6d, 10-foot of stone steps at 3d' (1740)."

[taken from 'The Great House of Stowe', by Michael TRINICK FRICS, reprinted from the Journal of the Royal Institution of Cornwall, New series, vol.8, pt.2, 1979]

There is no mention in the above accounts of a plaster fireplace overmantle matching the description of the one in Bideford, but the above accounts only list the items reused at South Molton, so this is not surprising. A description of the exterior and interior of Stowe is found as follows:

A large Square Pile projecting 2 wings which are not longer than to contain one window on a side... Fretwork ceilings elegantly performed to some of the rooms (ie: elaborate plaster ceilings), and very good carving in the wood to adorn the chimney pieces of fruit, fowl, flowers etc. The Chapel is wainscoted and fitted up with cedar. The grand staircase is adorned on three broadsides with views of this house, Plymouth and Biddiford, the three places most dear to Lord Bath... (I also saw) the bed that Charles II dyed in, of crimson velvet.

[taken from diary of John LOVEDAY, 1711-1789, published by Sarah MARKHAM – he visited Kilkhampton on 10th June 1736].

From this description it appears that whilst there were ornate plaster ceilings in Stowe, there was a lot of wood carving (also recorded in the diary of Daniel DEFOE in 1739, who says that they were done by London carvers: father & son Stephen & Michael CHUKE, and are not excelled by Grinling GIBBONS himself) including some to fireplace overmantles.

Other items from Stowe House are known to be scattered elsewhere in various Gentlemen's houses in Devon and Cornwall:

- 'Marhayes' in Marhamchurch near Bude – quoins stones, plinth moulding, window cases.
- 'Place' at Padstow – carved cherubs.
- Stowe House in Buckinghamshire – chapel interior.
- Rosemount and West Cottage in Kilkhampton – stonework.
- 'Cross', Little Torrington – staircase, timber panelling, 6-panelled doors, round-headed window.
- Molford House, South Molton – a complete room in pine panelling with overmantle painting, and Lord BATH's coronet carved on a chimney piece.
- Guildhall, South Molton – sash-windows, rustic quoins, Corinthian capitals, 8-panelled doors, wainscoting, plaster mouldings, large painting of Charles II. The complete Mayor's parlour (formerly a ladies bed-chamber from Stowe) with chimney piece of carved flowers and fruit.

So one of Cornwall's grandest houses only stood for about 60 years, before being 'recycled'.

A man of Stratton indeed lived long enough to see its site a cornfield before the building existed, and after the building was destroyed, a cornfield again.

[Richard POLWHELE, History of Cornwall, 1808]

A subsequent examination of the ABBOTT family 'Pattern Book' has revealed an interesting image. This Pattern Book was used by the famed family of ornate plasterwork designers and installers, for a period of about 150 years, so dating the drawings found therein, is not exact. However, much of this work appears to have originated from John ABBOTT (born 1639/40, married 1677, died 1727). There is a note in the front of this book: "John ABBOTT, his booke, 1665".

The following design was found therein, which when compared to a section of the overmantle, demonstrates a very similar match.

In the above side-by-side images you can see matching scrollwork, roundels and a central square enclosure with a shield ready for the customer's own coat of arms. Flowers are sited at the boss-points where strapwork comes away from the square feature.

The only difference is towards the right-hand side, where a man's figure has been inserted in place of the cameo-face suggested as part of the ABBOTT design. Arranging for the man's hands to hold onto something linked to the square feature can explain any subsequent differences in this area. But apart from that, these images are virtually identical.

It seems almost certain that this is a previously unacknowledged item of ABBOTT workmanship, and possibly dates from the time in the late 1600s when John ABBOTT was doing some of his best work. This links well with the construction date of Stowe House in 1679.

If this overmantle did come from Stowe House and was removed in 1739, we can speculate that it was purchased (as many other items were), and placed in the building which became the Three Tuns Tavern on Bideford Quay. It later became hidden behind panelling, only to be rediscovered nearly 200 years later, and an assumption incorrectly made that the building was formerly a GRENVILLE town house.

- Orchard Close (three quarters of an acre) is bounded on the west by parsonage field, and on the north by east, by the said Earl's land and the town.
- Middle Catts-hole (7 acres), bounded by the highways, and the said EARL OF BATH's land.
- Eastern Catts-hole with Cleve, all bounded by the highways, and the said EARL OF BATH's land.
- Sanctuary (11 acres) bounded by the highways on all sides except one, which is the EARL OF BATH's land.
- Chappel Hays (3 acres) bounded by the said EARL OF BATH's land, and the highways.

Catshole Lane still exists and is over half a mile from the Bridge Street site, so the lands of the EARL OF BATH obviously extended a considerable distance.

The Grange Estate:

In the 1690s, a surveyor called Joel GASCOYNE, was commissioned by the GRENVILLE family to survey their lands and estates in Cornwall, which ended up being the first large-scale map of that County. Around 1700 he started work on the GRENVILLE lands in Devon, working first on their estate called 'Grange' East-the-Water at Bideford [see Appendix 25 for details]. However the death of the EARL OF BATH in 1701 curtailed this commission, so no more maps were produced.

When compared with modern maps, we can show the exact location and extent of this Grange estate.

Torrington Lane forms the southern boundary. Grange Road, Chudleigh Avenue, Ayres Close, Heathfield Road, Southfield Road, Northfield Road, and Mines Road are some of the streets which now occupy this site.

The feature on the map (bottom left) which looks like a house, is when viewed in detail, actually a small road/hardstanding, screened from the main road by a gate. Around this are possibly indicated some agricultural lean-to's, but it is clear that there is no large house as part of this estate.

The only large house in the vicinity is this one shown on the 1717 plan of Bideford (now the Royal Hotel). The left-hand (northern) part of this is reputedly of ancient origin. This could well be the house associated with the Grange Estate.

Church Rates:

A list of properties upon which Church Rates were levied, has survived for 1672. This document contains the following locations and descriptions of properties upon which the EARL OF BATH was charged rates:

Eastland

The Right Hon'ble John EARL OF BATHE for Great Putshole, late in the possession of Mr John DARRACOTT – 4d

East the Water on the East Side

The said Earle for late John HALSES house – 2d

The said Earle for late BERRYMANS house – 1d

The said Earle for late Kings house by escheate – 1d

Backes and Kaye, from the north to the south end

The foresaid Earle for TALLAMEYS Shopp & Courtledge – 3d

The foresaid Earle for the Courtledge behind PRUSTS house – 1d

Tower Street

The said Earl for late Mr TRAVENS House – 2d

Bridge Street

The said Earle for a stable – 1d

Buttgarden

The said Earle for two gardens – 2d

The said Earle for a garden in possession of Mr HAMAN – ½d

Bullhill

The said Earle for a house & garden – 1d

Maiden Street

The said Earle for a house in hand – 1d

Westland

The foresaid Earle for East Winsford – 4d

The said Earle for Newhall – 3d

The same for Uppacott – 1s.3d

It is interesting to see that a Stable was mentioned in Bridge Street. The Old Place House was also mentioned (see earlier section of this report), but rates on this were being paid by a Mr John HILL (Bideford Town Clerk). It is not clear what type of properties qualified for Church Rates, so there was no doubt more GRENVILLE land than is suggested above.

In the above Rates list, we did also have these entries:

Eastland

Henry BERRY for Porte – sixe pence

Samuell JOHNS for Granghouse & grounds – eight pence

This ‘Grangehouse & grounds’ could refer to the House and Estate mentioned above.

Alignments:

The above 1884 large-scale map of Bideford faces north/south in the traditional manner. The street plan and Quay of Bideford follow this orientation pretty closely. However, we have three features on this map which appear to share a different alignment, these being the only ancient features on this plan.

1 to 3 Bridge Street indicated here as the extended 'Royal Mail' Public House, are on a different alignment to anything else in the street, apart from the Town Hall whose later construction obviously mirrored the older buildings it sits next to. In particular they appear to have little relationship with No's 4 & 5 Bridge Street, which are also being investigated as part of the main report.

It is interesting to note that 1 - 3 Bridge Street share virtually the same alignment as the Church and the Longbridge. This shared alignment is several degrees offset from a true east/west direction, and is good evidence of their shared earlier origins. The Churchyard is largely square and in a north/south orientation, completely different from the church itself. This suggests that the confinements of this churchyard were established in a later period, along with the rest of Town.

Early calculations for an East/West alignment (essential for all churches), were once made using the North Star (Polaris) but during the 13th century this star was several degrees offset from its present position today, meaning that an East/West alignment would appear to oscillate slightly. In the late 13th century, magnetic lodestone compasses became available and would have appeared to be more accurate. However, unknown to the user at that time, the position of magnetic north was also offset several degrees east of the present north pole.

Either of these methods of calculating a true East/West alignment would therefore have resulted in structures with a present day alignment appearing to be slightly WNW of today's due West. This is the case with all three of these structures and therefore a strong indication of their common build date. Since we know that the Church and the Longbridge have a similar build date of the mid-13th century, this appears to confirm a similar build date for an early property on the site of 1-3 Bridge Street.

When considering why the Longbridge has such an alignment, we must remember that it was commonplace to give thanks for a safe crossing on any bridge in Medieval England and the existence of the Allhallows Chapel at the western end of the Longbridge provides ample evidence of the Bridge's religious connections.

When considering why the GRENVILLEs built their Manor at 1-3 Bridge Street on this religious alignment, we need only look at their pious credentials in the 13th century. Not only did they have their own chapel and dedicated crypt within the church being built adjacent to their house, but it was the GRENVILLEs who championed and no doubt considerably invested in the building of the Bridge. In addition to which, there is the not inconsiderable fact that by the end of the 13th century, the GRENVILLE family had already built Neath Abbey and two of their number had served as Archbishops (Canterbury and York).

Coat of Arms:

The key to understanding No.1 Bridge Street and its historical associations was felt to lie in the Coat of Arms which was discovered on the wall of an upper room.

Whose Arms were they, and what were they doing on this wall?

The Coat of Arms found on the wall of No.1 Bridge Street, was believed to depict the Arms of MARWOOD of MARWOOD. Research was undertaken into this family, looking at possible links with the GRENVILLEs or for any other reasons why this would be here. No valid reason for this was able to be discovered (see main Statement of Significance Report for details of this abortive research).

The Listing Description of this property stated the following:

"INTERIOR not inspected, but description by WH Rogers refers to early C17 broad-rib ceiling divided by inserted partitions: 'on the walls of a bedroom are the arms of Marwood of Marwood, a chevron between 3 goats heads caboshed, horned or'. (Rogers WH: Notes on Bideford: P.76)."

An 1890 edition of Burkes Peerage details four variants of MARWOOD, each of which describes the three goats erased as argent [silver] and the background as gules [red]. The Arms on the wall of No.1 are displaying neither silver nor red colours.

Other similar images found, are these Arms for the Company of Cordwainers (left). However, these are on an azure [blue] background – again not the same as at Bridge Street.

On the right the Arms of a branch of the WHITE family of Pembrokehire (colours not known).

However, these are not connected to this Bideford property.

The Arms at 1 Bridge Street are now believed to be those of William MEREDITH of Stansty near Wrexham – as per this illustration.

The reason for these Arms being on the wall of this property in Bideford will now be explained.

The MEREDITH connection:

In October 1652 Sir John GRENVILLE (generation 19) married Jane WYCHE at the family home at Stowe in Cornwall.

Jane WYCHE was the daughter of Sir Peter WYCHE & Jane MEREDITH (the daughter of Sir William MEREDITH) of Stansty near Wrexham in Denbighshire. They married in 1627 in Middlesex.

Their daughter Jane GRENVILLE (nee WYCHE) died in 1660.

The period of their marriage, 1652 to 1660, is critical in the next stage of this research.

Genealogically speaking we therefore have:

- William MEREDITH from Stansty in Denbighshire marrying Jane PALMER (Jane was the daughter of Sir Thomas PALMER who was knighted following the sacking of Cadiz in 1596).
- William and Jane MEREDITH had several children of whom the sole-surviving female heiress Jane MEREDITH married Sir Peter WYCHE.
- Jane and Peter WYCHE had a number of children of whom sole-surviving female heiress Jane WYCHE married John GRENVILLE.
- Jane WYCHE's mother Jane (nee MEREDITH) died in 1660.
- Jane GRENVILLE (nee WYCHE) had a brother (Sir Cyril WYCHE) who leased Bridge Street in 1657.

Therefore the Coat of Arms could not be earlier than John and Jane's marriage of 1652, and was probably put there shortly afterwards, to commemorate the joining of these two families.

The MEREDITH and GRENVILLE families were not unconnected, as the following text describes:

In 1559, Warham St Leger [Sir Richard GRENVILLE's father in law] inherited Leeds Abbey in Kent from his father. In 1573, Warham St Leger transferred the estate to Sir William MEREDITH of Stansty, Denbighshire. In 1581, MEREDITH's son, also named William, purchased lands from Warham St Leger that had previously formed part of the estate. The estate passed through Sir Richard MEREDITH to Sir Roger MEREDITH in 1723.
[Hasted, Edward, 1798. The History and Topographical Survey of the County of Kent: Volume 5. Canterbury: W Bristow.]

The MEREDITH Baronetcy, of Stansty (Wrexham) was created in the Baronetage of England on 13 August 1622 for Sir William MEREDITH Knight, of Leeds Abbey in Kent; treasurer and paymaster of the army under Elizabeth I and James I. [Wikipedia]

The following Estate Map of Leeds Abbey was created by Thomas BADESLADE in 1719, and reproduced in 'Harris's History of Kent'.

Although unclear in this reproduction, the Coat of Arms (top-centre) are 8-quartered, and the top-right of these shows the MEREDITH Arms – identical to those on the wall in No.1 Bridge Street.

The MEREDITH and GRENVILLE families had been connected for a couple of generations, and this was re-confirmed by the marriage of John GRENVILLE (1ST EARL OF BATH) to Jane WYCHE (a MEREDITH descendant) in October 1652.

The 1600s:

The 'New Place House' constructed by Sir Richard GRENVILLE in 1585, was still in family hands in 1623, as it is believed that this was where Sir Richard's widow was living until the time of her death. Sometime after 1623, the house must have been sold out of GRENVILLE ownership, as there is no mention of a Bideford mansion in the Will of Sir Bevill GRENVILLE, written 1639. His 'mansion house at Stowe' is mentioned, but for Bideford we only have mention of the manor and its associated properties.

However, we know that a generation later in 1670, John GRENVILLE (EARL OF BATH) was still in control of land in Bridge Street, as some of this was donated to the Church. If there was still a Manor House in Bideford in the 1640s and 1650s, this must have been the property in Bridge Street.

From dendro-analysis of timbers in this property, we know that someone spent considerable money on 1 and 2 Bridge Street around 1630 (give or take 10 years). At this time the property was largely rebuilt, using timber which almost certainly came from GRENVILLE estates in Cornwall. If the 'new manor' at 6 The Quay had been disposed of at that time, then investment was needed in a replacement, and the 'Old Place' was significantly modernised to become the administrative manor once again.

After the death of Sir Bevill GRENVILLE in 1643, his widow Grace is seen selling off some of the ancillary GRENVILLE property (document G-3129 - 1645) in Devon and Cornwall. No significant properties were sold, and the main estates at Bideford and Stowe remained intact. When she dies in 1647, Grace GRENVILLE mentions no property in her will, the GRENVILLE estates having already been passed to male heir John in the will of her late husband Sir Bevill.

In February 1650, document G-3205 [see Appendix 17] suggests that John GRENVILLE was raising money for the Royalist cause in the Civil War, by mortgaging the Manor and Barton of Bideford, and all its ancillary properties. Two years later, document G-2892 tells us that these matters were settled, by John having shown his worth to the Royalist cause, and being thought worthy of marrying heiress Jane WYCHE the daughter of Royalist Sir Peter WYCHE.

Jane's grandfather Sir William MEREDITH is mentioned in the Agreement to Levy Fine in 1657, when he is lending money to his grandson-in-law John GRENVILLE. In this year, the Manor of Bideford (and presumably the house there) was apparently not being used by John & Jane, as a document was drawn up leasing this to Jane's brother Cyril WYCHE, presumably being used as collateral for the loan of further monies in the Royalist cause.

In 1652, John GRENVILLE and his new wife Jane were setting up homes for themselves. John had inherited both Stowe and Bideford, and like his ancestors before him, chose to stay in both places. It is believed that the upper room at 1 Bridge Street was decorated in or soon after 1652, and that the room in question may have been the boudoir of Jane GRENVILLE (nee WYCHE).

Only the Arms on the right-hand side of the fireplace wall survive. There would almost certainly have been a balancing Coat of Arms on the left-hand side, and we can speculate that these two sets of Arms would have been those of Jane's paternal and maternal lines.

WYCHE Arms

MEREDITH Arms

The left-hand side would have been the male line, and have depicted the WYCHE family Arms. The right-hand side depicted the female line – this being the MEREDITH Arms.

Research is being undertaken by the Royal College of Arms to determine whether this particular version of the MEREDITH arms was registered, as there are differences in colour between the accepted MEREDITH Coat of Arms, and this version. The background colour of the accepted Arms is red (gules), whereas the background colour here is white or silver (argent).

It is generally the case that red was the colour for valour, and would therefore naturally apply to a male lineage. However, as these Arms were being used on a female line, this would have been inappropriate and a white background denoting purity would be far more acceptable.

By 1657, the Civil War was effectively over, and Parliament was in charge of the Country. However, it wasn't working well, and there were political moves to bring back Prince Charles (later to be King Charles II) and reinstate him as monarch. More money was borrowed by John GRENVILLE for this cause. He was living at Stowe at this time, and rented the un-used parts of his estate (ie: the Manor of Bideford) to his wife's brother Sir Cyril WYCHE [see document BRAB-328/8 in Appendix 19, and G-2885 in Appendix 20]. Discussions took place with a friend and colleague William MORICE, who undertook discussions with Richard CROMWELL (son of the now-deceased Oliver CROMWELL) to start the process of arranging for the return of King Charles II.

In 1663, after Charles had been reinstated as Monarch, a large GRENVILLE estate in Bideford was let to Nicholas MORICE (possible son of William MORICE). This was an estate East-the-Water at Bideford, probably the same one referred to as 'Grange' in a previous document of 1633 [See document G-2932 in Appendix 13, and Map of Grange Estate in Appendix 25].

In 1665, John GRENVILLE's debts had all been settled by Charles II, and it was confirmed that the Bideford Town Council's claim on the manorial rights was annulled [see document G-3221 in Appendix 22, and G-3222 in Appendix 23].

A further document dated 1666 (BRAB-328/19 in Appendix 24) indicates that John GRENVILLE had not paid off all his debts on properties that he owned. It can be seen that he wasn't particularly good with money, and his son Charles committed suicide over financial matters. His grandson died young of smallpox in 1711, and the unbroken line of male GRENVILLEs in Bideford finally came to an end.

The Manor of Bideford passed down female GRENVILLE lines, and after the death of Countess GRANVILLE in 1744 it was bought by the Earl and Countess of GOWER, who in turn sold it to the CLEVELANDs of Tapeley in 1751. They in turn sold it to the Corporation of Bideford in 1881.

[For a transcript of this 1881 sale document, see appendix 26]

Conclusions:

GRENVILLE Heritage:

The GRENVILLE family have held land and estates in Bideford since the 11th century. They were Lords of the Manor and were instrumental in turning Bideford into a thriving port and commercial centre. They gave Charters to Bideford in 1204, 1272 and 1575; they built the Parish Church there in 1259; and bridges across the river Torridge in the 1280s and the 1320s. In 1340 they also acquired the manor of Stowe near Kilkhampton in Cornwall, and from thence they inhabit both Stowe and Bideford. They appear to have had both a 'country estate' and a 'town estate'.

The GRENVILLES in Bideford:

Sir Roger GRENVILLE grew up at Bideford, and gained a maritime background, leading to his appointment as Captain of Henry VIII's flagship the 'Mary Rose'. This ill-fated vessel foundered in 1545 killing him and over 400 other sailors. His father died six years later, and all the GRENVILLE estates including the manor of Bideford, passed in trust to the celebrated Sir Richard GRENVILLE. He was aged just eight at the time.

Birthdate of Sir Richard GRENVILLE:

There is no surviving record of the birth or baptism of Sir Richard GRENVILLE, but we know from other documents that Richard was 'aged eight (and no more)' on 15th June 1550, thereby giving us his exact birthdate of 15th June 1542.

Birthplace of Sir Richard GRENVILLE:

The estate of Buckland Abbey was purchased in 1541, but we have shown conclusively that Sir Richard GRENVILLE could not have been born there. Neither can he have been born at Stowe House, as the Kilkhampton Registers do not record any of the GRENVILLE children there. The Bideford Registers have not survived for the 1540s, but it is almost certain that these would have recorded the birth and baptism of 'Sir' Richard. The son of the Lord of the Manor would have warranted a fine entry.

Bridge Street:

From research into the properties which currently occupy the land at the bottom of Bridge Street, we have shown that these have historically been identified as the location of 'Place House', the ancient manor house of the GRENVILLE family. Historical features found within these premises, and subsequent dendro-analysis of the earliest timbers have shown that this property was largely reconstructed around the 1630s, using timber from the GRENVILLE estates in Cornwall.

In No.1 Bridge Street, there is evidence of walls which pre-date the 1630 reconstructions, so remnants of the mediaeval manor may well still survive. But this site can be the only place where Sir Richard GRENVILLE was born.

The Coat of Arms found painted on a bedroom wall in number 1 Bridge Street, has been shown to commemorate a marriage in 1652, so cannot date from before that year. The fireplace wall upon which it is situated, is about 20 years earlier, so this painting must have been part of a redecoration scheme for John & Jane GRENVILLE in the early 1650s.

After the Civil War and restoration of the monarchy in 1660, the building no longer appears to have had GRENVILLE occupants. Later GRENVILLES lived at Stowe House, and the direct line of GRENVILLE descent died out in 1711.

Sir Richard's House:

By 1585 Sir Richard had made himself a fortune, and there are records to show that he built himself a grand mansion on the riverfront at Bideford, using captured Spanish prisoners as labourers. The location of this building has been shown with a good degree of certainty to be where numbers 3-5 The Quay are now (see page 36), with the house reaching back as far as Allhalland Street.

Architectural feature:

The plaster overmantle with the GRENVILLE Coat of Arms in number 8 The Quay, has been resited from elsewhere. The supposed date of this (c.1630s) is incorrect, and that the only house this feature could have come from, is Stowe House. This house was constructed in 1679 and demolished in 1739. It appeared later in Bideford having been part of the sale of items from Stowe, and built into number 8 The Quay.

Terminology:

In the following transcribed documents and other research, we have references to the: Manor / Barton / Grange / Borough / Old Place / and New Place all of which belonged to the GRENVILLE family in Bideford. The following assessment of the meaning of these terms, and what they refer to, may be of use in understanding these sources further:

Manor:

'Manor' would be the general term for the estate, house and lands of GRENVILLEs in Bideford – used until references appear for 'Borough' in the early 17th century.

The 'Manor House' would have specifically referred to the properties at 1 to 3 Bridge Street, from the 13th century until 1585. (Once the Quayside house had been built in 1585, the Manor House transferred to the new property).

Sometime in the mid 1600s, after 1-3 Bridge Street had been rebuilt, and the Quayside property was sold, if there was a need to mention a 'Manor House' this would have referred to the Bridge Street property.

Barton:

'Barton' generally refers to the associated farm buildings of a Manor House, often helping to enclose a courtyard.

In the case of the associated documents below, we find this term mentioned in 1624, 1633, 1639, 1650, 1652, and 1657.

The exact property being called by this name is unclear, but could refer to the Bridge Street properties, given that 'New Place House' still existed on Bideford Quay, and the GRENVILLEs probably no longer needed a 'Manor House' at Bideford.

Grange:

This term appears to apply to a GRENVILLE estate East-the-Water at Bideford. The location of this land has been identified (see earlier research notes), and a possible location for the associated building is the Royal Hotel (left-hand part), which was known to be a significant property in 1717.

Borough:

The Borough of Bideford is referred to in sources almost as far back as the GRENVILLEs go, but this can be taken to mean a 'Manorial Borough'.

Generally though 'Borough' is a term used from a point in the 17th century when the GRENVILLEs start handing over control and possible assets to a Town Council, and which then sent MPs to Parliament. From thence, this would refer to the Town Council's lands and assets.

Old Place House:

This referred to the properties at 1 to 3 Bridge Street from 1585.

We know that these properties were also known by this name in 1672.

New Place, or Place House:

This refers to Sir Richard GRENVILLE's quayside mansion built in 1585.

At this time it effectively became the new 'Manor House'.

It was still referred to as the New Place, even after it had left GRENVILLE ownership in the 1670s.

Charter of Bideford (undated) c.1204

This undated early Charter, written in Latin, is translated and transcribed in full in Rev. GRANVILLE's History of the GRENVILLE family (pages 32 & 33).

Let all men that are present and to come, know that I Richard the son of Richard of GRENVILE, have granted and confirmed, for me and my heirs forever, the writing of Richard of GRENVILLE, my grandfather, made to the Burgesses of Bideford, in these words: Let all men that are present and to come, know, that I Richard de GRENVILE have granted, and by this my present writing confirmed, to all those who do or shall hold a burgage within the town of Bideford, as well as on the east part of the water of the Torridge, as on the west part, all liberties of Britolia, as far as in my power doth lie, to defend to them and to whomever they shall assign, to be holden and had of me, and of my heirs for ever; that is to say, in such manner, that every one holding one messuage or a garden with six acres of land abroad of my lordship, shall pay for the same on the feast of St. Michael, to me or my bailiff, in the town of Bideford, twelve pence; and he that holds one messuage with an orchard only, shall yield to me for the same sixpence the same day, for all services and exactions, excepting only homage. And if it happen that any of the aforesaid burgesses shall make default, or offend in any thing in my court, they shall for sixpence be clearly discharged thereof. And if they will wage law, they shall do it with their hands. And I have also granted to the said burgesses common of pasture with their beasts throughout, one on the west part of the river Torridge, where, in the time of Richard my father, they were wont to common: And that every one may give or sell his burgage, or otherwise alienate, saving to me and my heirs the rent of assize of every such burgage: And that every one for his or their burgage against me and my heirs, shall pay for a release twelve pence and no more. And I have also granted to the aforesaid burgesses of Bideford, toward the enlarging of the liberties aforesaid, that they shall do suit to my court from month to month, or for a shorter time, upon reasonable warning, on Tuesday: And that the portreeve of the town be at the court to shew forth the attachments and plaints belonging to the lord, as it hath been used and accustomed. And I have also granted that all the burgesses of Bideford, and every of them, in fairs and markets throughout all my lands, town, and waters, they shall be quiet and free from all toll, custom, censary, or stallage, to be given to me or to any of mine. And on the Tuesday next after the feast of St. Michael, all the aforesaid burgesses shall come to my aforesaid court (except those of whom it shall be faithfully testified that they are beyond the sea, or on pilgrimage, or in doing their affairs and merchandizing without the country): And then they shall chuse one burges to be head officer; and the same head officer shall have, throughout the year, toll and censary of the town by land and water, to the year's end for ten shillings to me to be paid, saving to me and my heirs the toll of my market on the Monday. And for this my grant and confirmation, the aforesaid burgesses of Bideford have given to me four marks of silver. And this my present writing, with the impression or print of my own seal I have made effectual for ever, these being witnesses, Sir Richard COFFIN, Richard of SPEKCOT, knights, Peter of Halsberry, Richard SNELLARD, Wellan DAKE, Osbert of Bury, Richard of Kokematon, and many others.

To this charter is appended a circular seal in green wax on which is a heater-shaped shield charged with the GRANVILLE arms, the inscription surrounding it being "SIGIL RIC DE GRENVILE."

Summary and Comments:

This Will of Sir Thomas GRAYNFIELD (generation 12) shows the affection that he had for Bideford, even though the family also had their estate at Stowe at this time.

Sir Thomas requests to be buried within the Church at Bideford, in the south-east of the chancel where an altar is to be made in his memory, and a chantry-priest appointed to pray for his soul.

His uncle was already priest at Bideford, and his will was that his son John should also become priest there or at Kilkhampton when a position became available if he wanted. Money was also provided to make vestments for the priest.

Thomas's eldest son and heir Roger is mentioned, and appointed executor. Roger is given jurisdiction to see his sister Oner (Honour) married. Honour married John BASSETT of Umberleigh & had seven children, but after his death she married again to Viscount LISLE (Arthur PLANTAGANET). In 1532 she became lady-in-waiting to Anne BOLEYN, and was later charged with looking after her daughter Elizabeth, later to become Queen Elizabeth.

Also mentioned is daughter Jan (Jane) who married John ARUNDELL of Trerice.

Will of Richard GREYNFELDE, 1549/50

The original Will of Richard GREYNFELDE appears to have been lost/destroyed in WW2, but this transcript has been taken from the History of the GRANVILLE Family, by Roger GRANVILLE, 1895. The first part is verbatim, the latter an abstract summary.

Will of Richard GREYNFELDE
(Grandfather of the celebrated Sir Richard GRENVILLE)
Written: 8th March 1545/46
Died at Stowe, Kilkhampton: 18th March 1550/51*

“Perceiving by faith and creation my naturall lyf to be transitory, holie mynding repentance, in my most humble maner aske of Almightye God forgivenessse, and also of all the world. And under the protection of God make and declare here my last Will and Testament. First, I bequeath my soule unto Almightye God, my bodie to be buryed in such holie place, where it shall please Almightye God to provide.”

He wills to Dame Maud his wife during the term of seventy years, if she so long live, his mansion and lands called Buckland, otherwise Buckland Graynfield, in as ample manner as he had by letters patent, dated 26th May 1542*. And after her decease he leaves them to Richard GRAYNFELD, son of Roger GRAYNFELD his late son and heir apparent, deceased, and his heirs male. Remainder to Degory GRAYNFELD, his brother. Remainder to John GRAYNFELD, his older brother.
The other mansions, viz: his mansion house in the town of Bideford, and all the residue of his town and borough of Bideford in com. Devon; his mansion place of Stowe, together with all gardens, orchards and ponds therewith, Stowe Park in com. Cornwall; his house and borough of Kilkhampton and his mansion of Woodford in the same county, together with all his other lands in Devon and Cornwall, he leaves to Richard his grandson and his heirs male.
Remainder to his brothers John and Digory and their heirs male.
Remainder to his right heirs.
He bequeaths to his daughter Mary 300 marks for her portion.
To his son-in-law Sir Richard LEE and Margaret his wife 100 marks.
To his son-in-law Robert WHETTALL, esq, and Jane his wife 100 marks.
To his brother-in-law John DRAKE and Amy his wife 20 marks.
The rest of his will shews him to have been a person of sound judgment and a master of economy. His executors were Dame Maud, his wife, his brother-in-law Edmund SPECCOTT esq, John BEAUCHAMP, his brother-in-law John KILLIGREW, and John BEVILL esquires.

He made a codicil to his will, dated at Stowe, 3rd January 1550/51*, and another on 10th March, and another on the 15th of March 1550/51*, which was but three days before his death.

[taken verbatim from Roger GRANVILLE's 1895 History of the GRENVILLE family]

Summary and Comments:

* the dates marked above are incorrect. Rev GRANVILLE must have wrongly calculated these.
The Will and Death dates should be 1549/50, not 1550/51.
And the Buckland property was purchased in 1541, not 1542 as stated in this transcript.

The GRENVILLE estates were extensive, and here we have one of the first references to the ownership of Buckland Abbey, herein called Buckland Graynild (ie: the home of the GREYNVILLE's at Buckland).

Richard's son and heir Roger was killed on the 'Mary Rose' in 1545, and this house was to be left to his grandson (the celebrated Sir Richard GRENVILLE), after the death of his wife Maud.

Of almost equal importance were the other principal properties:

- Mansion House in Bideford, including the rest of the Town and Borough.
- Mansion House at Stowe in Cornwall, with its estate.
- Mansion at Woodford in Cornwall.

All the above were also left to his grandson Sir Richard GRENVILLE.

The the final codicil was dated 15th March 1549/50, and Richard is said to have died 3 days later. His burial was on 23rd March 1549/50, so a death on 18th March, and burial 4 days later is about right.

Whilst the body of the above will is a summary, the majority of this will was recorded verbatim in the subsequent Inquisition Post Mortem held for Richard GREENFIELD – see Appendix 5 below.

Notes:

An Inquisition Post Mortem (examination after death) was undertaken when a deceased person was believed to have held Crown Lands, and to determine what rights and income were due to the Crown. Although these documents were returned to Chancery, this was a local matter, and if a deceased person had lands in more than one County, a separate I.P.M. was held for each region. They are mostly in Latin and follow a standard format:

- Names of the officials and Jurors.
- Name of the deceased and date of death.
- Brief description of landholdings and approx value.
- Extracts from any Will confirming inheritance of lands (in English).
- Name of the next heir, and their age.

When the heir was under age, the King kept possession until the heir came of age, and received the rights of wardship and marriage. Where there was no rightful heir, the lands reverted to the Crown. These feudal tenures and rights were abolished from the time of the Civil War onwards.

[Translation of the above]: Indented inquisition taken at Stratton in the aforesaid county on the first day of July in the fourth year of the reign of the Lord King Edward the Sixth by grace of God king of England, France and Ireland, defender of the faith, and on earth supreme head of the English and Irish Church, in the presence of Sir Hugh TREVANYON, eschaetor of the said King in the aforesaid county, by virtue of the writ from the said Lord King of 'diem clausit extremum' [literally 'he has closed his last day'] directed to the said eschaetor after the death of Sir Richard GRENVILLE, and sewn on to this inquisition. [This inquisition was taken] on the oath of Philip PENKEVELL esquire, William PENFOYN esquire, John LYPPYNGCOTT esquire, John KEMPTHORN esquire, John LAVELYS esquire, John TRIPLETT, William FACY, William LANGFORD, John WATTES William HENDER, John MARTEN, Thomas LANGDON, Richard MORYCARN, Hugh TREFREWE, John TREBARFFOTT, John JULE, John WARD, Pascasius WYKETT, John MYLL and William WYLLYE, Who say on their oath that the said Sir Richard GRENVILLE named in the said writ was possessed of and in the manor and burgh of Kilkhampton with appurtenances in the aforesaid county, and of the advowson of the church of Kilkhampton belonging to the said manor, as well as of three messuages, 300 acres of arable land, 40 acres of meadow, 120 acres of wood with appurtenances in Stowe and Dinsmouth which are in the demesne, and parcel of the said manor, and of a messuage with appurtenances in Tytismarsh within the parish of Kilkhampton in the aforesaid county, in his lordship and as of fee. And furthermore the jurors aforesaid say that the said Richard GRENVILLE was possessed in his lordship as of fee of and in the manor of Tenyell with appurtenances in the aforesaid county, and of and in ten messuages, 100 acres of arable land, 30 acres of meadow, 40 acres of pasture, and 60 acres of broom and heath with appurtenances in Tenyell aforesaid, which manor of Tenyell and other premises in Tenyell aforesaid, with appurtenances, the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE acquired from the most excellent King Henry the Eighth, father of the said King [Edward], by letters patent shown in evidence to the aforesaid jurors during the taking of this inquisition and bearing date the 20th day of September in the 38th year of the reign of the said Lord King Henry the Eighth [1546]. And the aforesaid jurors furthermore say that the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE was possessed in lordship as of fee in 20 acres of arrable land, four acres of meadow, and 20 acres of broom and heath with appurtenances [lying] and being in Fauston within the parish of Warbestowe [Fonston in Warbstow] in the aforesaid county, and also of and in one messuage, six acres of meadow, ten acres of arable land, six acres of pasture, and 30 acres of broom and heath with appurtenances lying and being in Cargarrowe within the parish of Saint Julyett [Cargurra in St. Juliot] in the aforesaid county, and of and in one messuage, 20 acres of arable land, four acres of pasture, three acres of meadow, and 20 acres of broom and heath with appurtenances lying and being in Dowland within the parish of Whytston [Whitstone] in the aforesaid county, and of and in one annuity or annual rentcharge of 16 pence arising from two messuages with appurtenances in Dowland aforesaid, and of and in 20 acres of arable land and 30 acres of broom and heath in Corry within the parish of Boyton in the aforesaid county, as well as of and in two messuages, two gardens, two acres of meadow, six acres of pasture, 20 acres of arable land, two acres of wood, and 20 acres of broom and heath with appurtenances lying and being in Polrewen near Fawy [Polruan near Fowey] in the aforesaid county. The aforesaid jurors say also that the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE for some time before his death was possessed of and in the manor of Woodford with appurtenances in the aforesaid county [but] by what authority or title the aforesaid jurors are completely unaware. And the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE being possessed of the aforesaid manors and other premises with their appurtenances for some time before his death, gave and granted, by a deed shown in evidence to the aforesaid jurors before the writing up of this inquisition, all and singular the aforesaid manors and other premises with their appurtenances to [two words illegible] a certain Edmund SPECCOTT, Robert YEO, John B[EAU]CHIMP, and John BEVYLL, esquires, to have to them, their heirs and assigns for ever, to implement the last will of the said Richard, the tenor of which deed follows in these words:

Let all present [and future] men know that I, Sir Richard GRENVILLE, have given, granted and by this my present deed have confirmed to Edmond SPECOTT, Robert YEO, John BEUCHIMP and John BEVILL, esquires, all my manors and burghs called Bedeford [Bideford], Kylkehampton [Kilkhampton] and Woodford, as well as all other manors, messuages, lands, tenements, rents, reversions and services lying and being within the kingdom of England to have and to hold all the aforesaid manors and hereditaments mentioned above with their appurtenances to the said Edmond, Robert, John and John, their heirs and assigns, for the implementation of the last will of me the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE, to hold of the chief lord of the fee for the rents and services thereon formerly due and lawfully accustomed. And I indeed the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE and my heirs will by these presents warrant and permanently defend all the aforesaid manors, burghs and other hereditaments with their appurtenances mentioned above to the said Edmond, Robert, John and John against all people. And furthermore know that I the aforesaid Richard have appointed as attorneys and deputies in my place my well-beloved [friends] in Christ, John DOCTON and William SUSSAN, as my true and lawful representatives to enter jointly and individually in my stead and name into all the aforesaid premises and their appurtenances, and take possession and seisin, to deliver full and peaceful possession to the said Edmond, Robert, John and John of all the premises mentioned above with their appurtenances according to the force, form and effect of this my present deed. Anything my said attorneys, or either of them, do or does by these presents in my name is to be considered ratified and acceptable. In witness of which matter I have placed my seal on this present writing. Given on the sixth day of March in the 37th year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth by grace of God King of England, France and Ireland, defender of the faith, and on earth the supreme head of the English and Irish Church [1545/46]. And furthermore the jurors aforesaid say that the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE after making the aforesaid writing, and some time before his death, declared his last will in writing concerning [? eight and another illegible number] acres of pasture in Kilkhampton aforesaid called Bechamclose Northp[ar]ke Colland Ryggeway P[ar]ke Sandway P[ar]ke Worth [part of word or words illegible] West P[ar]ke Belle in Kilkhampton aforesaid in the county aforesaid, and concerning the burgh of Kilkhampton and the mansion of Woodford in the same county. The tenor of which will, indeed, follows in these words:

[Translation of the above]: And furthermore the aforesaid jurors say that the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE, after the aforesaid will was made in writing and before his death, declared his further will orally, and not in writing, in the presence of Thomas ARUNDELL of Lee, esquire, and Walter SKYNNER and Richard BENNETT (who made oath to us on the sacred gospels at the taking of this inquisition, and were carefully examined by us the said jurors), [and this will] concerned certain lands and tenements in Woodford aforesaid in the county of Cornwall, in manner and form following, that is to say: that as litigation and strife had broken out before these times between the same Sir Richard GRENVILLE on the one side and the aforesaid John GRENVILLE his brother on the other, about and concerning the legal title to and possession of various lands and tenements with their appurtenances in Newton, Fauston, Cargurra, Dolland, Corry, Porruyn [Polruan] & Woodford in the same county of Cornwall, the same Sir Richard GRENVILLE declared, willed and gave all and singular the aforesaid messuages, lands and tenements with their appurtenances in Woodford aforesaid to the aforesaid John GRENVILLE, to hold to him, his heirs and assigns for ever, but on condition that if the aforesaid John GRENVILLE wished to make a satisfactory legal title before the feast of Easter then next following in respect of all the aforesaid premises in Newton Fauston Cargurra Dolland Corry & Polruan, in favour of the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE and his heirs, as is mentioned in the first codicil to the will of Sir Richard GRENVILLE himself, or if the aforesaid John GRENVILLE or his heirs at some other time then to come and successively – either before the said feast of Easter or after it – wished to bind themselves legally and in writing to Degory his brother and Thomas ARUNDELL of Lee, esquire, and their heirs, that they will make a satisfactory title and guarantee concerning the aforesaid lands and tenements in Newton Fauston Cargurra Dolland Corry & Polruan to the aforesaid Degory GRENVILLE and Thomas ARUNDELL, to hold to themselves and their heirs to the use of Richard GRENVILLE their kinsman and the heirs of the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE and his heirs – then that will of the said Sir Richard GRENVILLE about the aforesaid lands and tenements in Woodford aforesaid [being given] to the aforesaid John GRENVILLE and his heirs should receive its force and remain in full effect, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the first will. And the jurors aforesaid say further that the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE died before the making of the aforesaid guarantee and before the aforesaid feast of Easter. And they say also that the aforesaid John GRENVILLE is bound to the said Degory GRENVILLE and Thomas ARUNDELL by a satisfactory legal instrument, to make a competent guarantee concerning all the aforesaid premises in Newton Fauston Cargurra Dolland Corry and Polruan according to the substance of the aforesaid condition. And the jurors aforesaid say further that the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE before his death bequeathed and gave orally in the prescribed manner, to the aforesaid John GRENVILLE his brother, 30 pounds of legal English money in consideration and full settlement for the aforesaid lands and tenements in Newton Fauston Cargurra Dolland Corry and Polruan, to be paid to the same John, his executors or assigns, after the guarantee concerning the same tenements in Newton Fauston Cargurra Dolland Corry and Polruan, according to the will, as made and implemented, of the same Sir Richard GRENVILLE. And furthermore the jurors aforesaid say that the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE, by his deed bearing date the 20th March in the 37th year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth [1545/46], for and in consideration of the good and acceptable service to the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE performed by Walter SKYNNER in times past, gave and granted to the aforesaid Walter SKYNNER an annuity or annual rent-charge of 40 shillings issuing from the manor of

Kilkhampton aforesaid with appurtenances, as well as from all messuages, lands, tenements and other hereditaments with their appurtenances in Kilkhampton aforesaid and Stowe, to have, raise and receive annually the said annuity or annual rent-charge of 40 shillings to the said Walter SKYNNER for the term of his life, as more fully appears and is confirmed in the same deed shown to the said jurors in evidence before the taking of this inquisition. And the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE by another deed bearing date the 10th day of March recently past, gave and granted to the aforesaid Walter SKYNNER, for his good service rendered, an annuity or annual rent-charge of 26 shillings and eight pence issuing from the manor of Tenyell aforesaid, to have, raise and receive annually the said annuity or annual rent-charge of 40 shillings to the said Walter SKYNNER for the term of his life, as appears more fully in the same deed similarly shown in evidence to the aforesaid jurors. And furthermore the jurors aforesaid say that the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE by another deed shown in evidence to the aforesaid jurors, dated 20 November in the third year of the reign of the present Lord King Edward the Sixth [1549], motivated by several considerations, gave and granted to a certain Richard LUCAS and Degory LUCAS one annuity or annual rent-charge of six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence issuing from all his messuages, lands and tenements in the parish of Kilkhampton in the said county of Cornwall, to have, raise and receive annually the said annuity or annual rent-charge of six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence to the said Richard LUCAS and Degory LUCAS for the term of their lives or the life of the longest liver, as by the same deed more plainly appears. And further the jurors aforesaid say that the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE by another deed similarly shown in evidence to the aforesaid jurors, bearing date the 10th day of October in the 31st year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth [1539], in consideration of the good and acceptable service to the aforesaid Richard performed by John APRISE in times past, and to be rendered later, gave and granted to the said John APRISE an annuity or annual rent-charge of 20 shillings issuing from a holding with appurtenances in Houndepytt, lying and being within the manor of Kilkhampton in the said county of Cornwall, to have, raise and receive annually the said annuity or annual rent-charge of twenty shillings to the said John APRYSE for the term of his life, as more plainly appears in that deed. And the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE, by another deed shown to the aforesaid jurors in evidence, bearing date the 10th day of March in the fourth year just elapsed of the reign of our present King Edward the Sixth [1549/50], in consideration of the good and loyal service to the aforesaid Richard performed and carried out by Thomas NELE his servant, gave and granted to the same Thomas NELE one annuity or annual rent-charge of ten shillings issuing from all his lands and tenements situated and lying in the county of Cornwall, to have, raise and receive annually the said annuity or annual rent-charge of ten shillings to the aforesaid Thomas NELE for the term of his life as more fully appears by the same deed. And the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE, by another deed similarly shown to the aforesaid jurors on the taking of this inquisition, bearing date the 12th day of March just passed in the fourth year of the reign of the present Lord King Edward the Sixth [1549/50], in consideration of the good and loyal service to the aforesaid Richard performed in the past and to be rendered later by his servant John BAWMAN, gave and granted to the aforesaid John BAWMAN one annuity or yearly rent-charge of 20 shillings issuing from the manor of Teynell with appurtenances in the said county of Cornwall to have, raise and receive annually the said annuity or annual rent-charge of twenty shillings to the aforesaid John BAWMAN for the term of his life, at the festivals of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary and St. Michael the Archangel in equal instalments, as by the same deed more plainly appears. And furthermore the jurors aforesaid say indeed that Roger GRENVILLE esquire, deceased, father of the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE, by his last will shown in evidence to the aforesaid jurors on the taking of this inquisition, gave and granted [next word illegible in tear] to Lewis LYPPYNGCOTT, then his servant, the office of bailiff of the manor of Kilkhampton aforesaid, together with fifteen shillings of annual rent-charge issuing from the same manor, for exercising, holding and keeping the said office, and for the aforesaid Lewis to receive the said annuity or annual rent-charge for the term of his life, as appears and is evident from the said will and by the inquisition after the death of the said Roger, [both] shown to us. And furthermore [they say] that [next word illegible] the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE in the aforesaid endorsement [next word illegible] of the codicil to his will gave and granted to John GRENVILLE his brother, all his interest in certain parcels of wood lying within the parish of Powghyll [Poughill] by the name of Heywood, which the same Richard had by a grant from the Abbot of Clyff, as is mentioned in the said endorsement. [And] the jurors aforesaid say that the aforesaid wood within the parish of Poughill aforesaid, so referred to by the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE by the name of Heywood wood, is called Merewood and not Heywood, and is that wood which the same Richard GRENVILLE willed [by his codicil] to John GRENVILLE, his brother, and the said Richard held no other wood within the aforesaid parish of Poughill. And further the jurors aforesaid say that the aforesaid manor and burgh of Kilkhampton, and the demesne lands, and the advowson of the aforesaid church, are held of the Lord King by knight's service, as of his manor of Wynkeley [Winkleigh] in the county of Devon, in the Lord King's hands by reason of the acquisition from James AUDELEY, then Lord of Heleyht [Heighley or Heleigh Castle] of the said manor of Winkleigh with appurtenances by King Edward the Third, ancestor of the present Lord King, in the 27th year of his reign, to hold to himself and his heirs for ever. And the aforesaid manor and burgh of Kilkhampton, and demesne land, are worth annually in all profits after outgoings 62 pounds, three shillings, and six pence, And [the jurors say] that the said messuage with appurtenances in Tyttysmarsshe aforesaid is held of John COPLESTON esquire, as of his manor of Northlee, but by what services the aforesaid jurors are completely unaware, and are worth annually in all profits after outgoings thirteen shillings and four pence. And [they say] that the aforesaid advowson of the church aforesaid is worth nothing because it [i.e. the living] is occupied. And [the jurors say] that the aforesaid manor of Tenyell with appurtenances is held of the Lord King in chief by knight's fee and is worth annually in all profits after outgoings eight pounds. And [the jurors say] that the said twenty acres of arable land and ten acres of pasture and other premises with appurtenances in Newton aforesaid are held of Francis, Earl of HUNTINGDON, as of his manor of Trewaunt, in socage, and are worth annually in all profits after outgoings, thirteen shillings. And [the jurors say] that the said ten acres of pasture, ten acres of land, and other premises in Fauston aforesaid are held of Sir Gavin CARUE as of his manor of Trelight [but] by what services the aforesaid jurors are completely unaware, and are worth annually in all profits after outgoings, twenty shillings. And [the jurors say] that the said messuage, six acres of meadow, ten acres of land and other premises with appurtenances in Cargarow [Cargurra] aforesaid are held of William REAPE esquire as of the manor of Tresparret [in St. Juliot] but by what services the aforesaid jurors are completely unaware, and are worth annually in all profits after outgoings five shillings. And [the jurors say] that the said messuage, 20 acres of arable land and other premises with appurtenances, and the aforesaid annual rent in Dowland and Corry aforesaid are held of Henry, Marquis of DORSET, but by what services the aforesaid jurors are completely unaware, and are worth annually in all profits after outgoings, twenty shillings. And [the jurors say] that the aforesaid messages, two gardens and other premises with their appurtenances in Polruan aforesaid are held of Thomas HASTYNGES esquire as of his manor of Pengelly but by what services the aforesaid jurors are completely unaware, and are worth annually in all profits after outgoings ten shillings. And [the jurors say] that the aforesaid manor of Woodford [in Morwenstow] with appurtenances is held of John COPLESTON esquire as of his manor of Northle [Northlee in Morwenstow] and is worth annually in all profits after outgoings fifty-four shillings and seven pence, but by what services the aforesaid jurors are completely unaware. And the jurors aforesaid furthermore say that the aforesaid Sir Bernard GRENVILLE held no other or more manors, granges, lands and tenements of the Lord King or of anybody else in lordship, reversion or in service in the aforesaid county on the day when he died. And [the jurors say] that the aforesaid Sir Richard GRENVILLE died on the eighteenth of March last past, and that the aforesaid Richard GRENVILLE is his kinsman and closest heir, namely the son of Roger GRENVILLE deceased [word or words illegible] heir of the said Sir Richard GRENVILLE. And [the jurors say] that on the fifteenth of June last past the same Richard GRENVILLE was aged eight and no more. In witness of which matter both the aforesaid Escheator as well as the aforesaid jurors have applied their seals to these presents. Given on the day, year and place in these documents first above-written.

Summary and Comments:

The Will summary in Appendix 4 gives us the same background information about the wishes of this Sir Richard GREYNFELD. However, this fuller version of Sir Richard's will gives us some better information about the property at Buckland.

This will was written in 1546, and it specifically mentions building operations being undertaken to construct his Mansion at Buckland. This is further evidence that this was not a family home at this time. Richard's widow Dame Mawde is being given permission to take as much timber from the woods on the estate to undertake these works, and then further wood to use as fuel in the house for the rest of her life. If Buckland is not sufficient for her, then she is also to have the mansion house at Bideford, and all the residue of the Town of Bideford.

The three codicils to this will are:

- (i) undated, but understood to be 3rd Jan 1549 [ie: 1549/50]
- (ii) 10th March 1549 [ie: 1549/50]
- (iii) 15th March 1549 [ie: 1549/50]

The final part of this document gives us the most valuable piece of information:

"...on the 15th June last the aforesaid same Richard GREYNFELD was aged eight years and no more."

Positive proof of the date of birth of Sir Richard.

This Inquisition was held to investigate the landholdings of this person in Cornwall. Richard GREYNFELD also had landholdings in Devon, and a separate inquisition was held to investigate these. This was held on 30th June 1550, the day before the Cornwall inquisition. The document is filed in the National Archives ref: C 142/90/26.

The content of the document appears similar to the above, but more faded, and less easy to read. It does however give corroborative information about the birth of his heir (Sir) Richard GRENVILLE, the details again stating that he was aged eight on 15th June 1550.

Charter of Bideford: 4th Sept 1575

Transcribed by David Carter taken from: An essay towards a history of Bideford in the County of Devon, by John Watkins, 1792, in Bodlean Library, Oxford.

And first the said maior, aldermen, and burgesses of the burrough and town of Bydeford, do covenant and grant, for themselves and their successors, to and with the said Richard Grenvile, his heirs and assigns, by these presents: That the said Richard Grenvile, his heirs and assigns, shall and may peaceably and quietly have, hold, occupie, and enjoy, all and singular such revenues, issues, profits, and commodities within the said manour, town, and burrough of Bydeford, as the said Richard before the making of the said letters patents, hath lawfully occupied and enjoyed, or of right, of might, have occupied or enjoyed, the said letters patents, or any thing or things therein conteyned notwithstanding, saving and always expected, one yearly rent of ten shillings and sixpence, which the burgesses or inhabitants of the said burrough of Bydeford, by the hands of the portreeve there, have heretofore payd to the said Richard Grenvile, together with the office of a portreeve; which yearly rent of ten shillings and sixpence, together with the office of the title of a portreeve, the said Richard Grenvile, for him and his heirs, doth by these presents give grant and release to the said maior, aldermen, and burgesses of the burrough and town of Bydeford, and to their successors, for ever – And also the said maior, aldermen, and burgesses, do covenant and grant, for themselves and their successors, to and with the said Richard Grenvile, his heirs and assigns, that if any revenues, issues, profits, or commodities, do at any tyme or tymes hereafter arise to the said maior, aldermen, and burgesses, by reason of the said markets, fairs, or of any of the liberties or franchises to them granted by our soveraigne Lady, by her Grace's letters patents, as shall happen to be employed and bestowed by the said maior, aldermen, and burgesses, as well in reasonable wages and fees, as also in such other matters and things, whereby they, in the right of their corporation, shall be charged, that then the said Richard Grenvile, his heirs and assigns, shall yearly, hereafter for ever, receive and enjoy the moiety of all and singular the said revenues, issues, profits, and commodities, to his and their only use and behoof. And for the true levying the revenues etc, aforesaid, according to the intent and meaning of these patents, the maior of the said town of Bydeford for the time being, with the assent of the said Richard, his heirs and assigns, shall yearly at the law court, to be holden within the said burrough and town of Bydeford the Munday next before the feast of Simon and Jude, nominate and appoint one sufficient man to be receavor within the said town and burrough, which said receavor shall take a corporal oath to receive the issues and profits arising within the said town and burrough and rightfully belonging to the said maior, aldermen and burgesses, by reason of the letters patents aforesaid, and thereof to make a true accompt before the maior of the said town for the time being. And that the said Richard Grenvile, his heirs and assigns, shall and may from time to time nominate and appoint one honest person to be present and hear the accompt of the said receavor and receavors, if the said Richard, his heirs or assigns, shall so think meet and convenient.

And further, the said maior, aldermen, and burgesses do covenant and grant, for themselves and their successors, to and with the said Richard Grenvile, his heirs and assigns, by these presents, that the maior, aldermen, and burgesses, shall not erect any house, messuage, nor other building, in or upon the premises for or concerning the sayd market or fayres, or shall grant to paie any wager or other thing touching the said corporation without the assent, advise, or agreement of the said Richard, his heirs or assigns, first had and obtained. And the said Richard Grenvile doth covenant and grant for himself, his heirs and assigns, to and with the said maior, aldermen, and burgesses of the burrough and town of Bydeford, and their successors, by these presents, that the said maior, aldermen, and burgesses, and their successors, for picage, stallage, and standings only concerning the said fayres and markets, for the use of their guildhall, prison, or other convenient room for any prison, or other convenient purpose concerning the corporation, shall and may have the use of a certain house in Bydeford, commonly called the Chappell, being neer the west part of the bridge end there, and of certain land and ground in Bydeford aforesaid, whereon certain lymekilns sometimes stood, and where a key, or wharfe, is now latelie builded; and also of all the streets, lanes, ways, and waste soyle within the said manour, burrough, and town of Bydeford, without any molestation, lett, trouble, suit in law, or vexation of the said Richard Grenvile, his heirs or assings, etc.

Summary and Comments:

Sir Richard GRENVILLE applied for the charter in 1572, probably knowing that this date was in celebration of his ancestors' original charter for Bideford of 1272. It was recorded that by the early 16th century Bideford's Markets and Festivals as granted by the original charter, had 'fallen into disuse'. It was also reported that the town was somewhat rundown by the time Sir Richard took over.

Charters were pretty much a Royal assent to a town to run its own affairs and generate its own revenue from Royally-permitted festivals and markets, and by whatever other means were similarly granted. GRENVILLE clearly knew that by re-instating and extending the rights granted under a Charter, he would be able to raise revenue from enacting various controls over the town, all no doubt designed to encourage commerce from which he as Principal would prosper.

The Port was also created more or less as part of the same Charter by Sir Richard. This was almost certainly done because he saw it as the primary route by which he expected to increase trade. Bideford was already trading extensively with the English settlements in Munster (Southern Ireland) by the time of the creation of the Port. (The Charter talks about a 'Portreeve' or 'Port Sheriff', a role specifically designed to ensure rules and taxes were not dodged by the ships using the port). Since GRENVILLE was something of a visionary, he saw the potential to raise revenue by making Bideford the primary English port for trading with the planned expansion of English settlements in Ireland. It may not be so far-fetched to assume that GRENVILLE also saw the Roanoke venture as an opportunity to add to that trade.

To achieve his grand design though, GRENVILLE knew he needed to have the support of the town's wealthies. He probably selected most of them himself to be part of 'his' town council. As if to prove a point, John SALTERNE the first Mayor was a Merchant Venturer and clearly would have seen a personal benefit from GRENVILLE's plans too. In effect the Town Council was initially a club for the wealthy of Bideford.

As to what rights the Council (the participants) had, it seems initially they were pretty much only what Grenville consented to or they mutually agreed with him on. In about 1610, there was a revision to the Charter brought about by the Council itself and directed against the GRENVILLES. It removed several powers from the GRENVILLES and gave them to the Town Council, in the realisation by the Council that they needed to be able to invest more heavily in their ever burgeoning charge.

As to what rights the public had, they could sell goods twice weekly to an ever increasing passing and port trade, and it gave them a security and degree of wealth.

Without the vision and drive of Sir Richard to create something out of Bideford, the town would never have had the prosperity it enjoyed for more than 200 years following his untimely death.

'Will' of Sir Richard GRENVILLE, 1585

The celebrated Sir Richard GRENVILLE of Bideford (1542-1591) is not known to have left a Will. However, before he left Bideford on his 1585 voyage to establish the first colony in America, he made the following indenture, giving details of his lands and what was to happen to them in the event of his death.

The original document does not appear to have survived, but this transcript produced by David Carter from the 1895 book on the GRENVILLE Family by Roger GRANVILLE, appears to be genuine and verbatim.

Summary and Comments:

GRENVILLE was a legal eagle of some repute, having studied law at the Inner Temple. The reasons for leaving his last wishes in the form of an Indenture rather than a Will, had probably been well thought out. With so many family connections woven into his complex affairs, any Will could have been contested for years. An indenture was probably a legal soft option to avoid that risk. He obviously didn't plan on dying at Flores in 1591, so he might have got round to writing a Will in later life, but it is not believed that he ever left anything except this indenture expressing his wishes.

Sir Richard's two surviving sons, Bernard and John, are mentioned, so that if Dame Mary did not survive, then the GRENVILLE inheritances would be administered for them by appointed trustees, of which Sir Walter RAWLEY (RALEIGH) was principal. The other people mentioned, ie: Nicholas, Humfrie, Arthur, Thomas, and Digorie, were all relatives through Sir Richard's cousins and uncles and aunts, of which there were many.

The twenty-year period referred to in the above document, was probably an arbitrary period sufficient to ensure that all his children had reached maturity and therefore none of them (or their inheritance) could be subjected to any disputes that could have been held in the Ward of Court for Minors. In earlier life GRENVILLE was made a Ward of Court and that may have influenced his decision to avoid that risk.

Sir Richard's wife Dame Mary GRENVILLE appears rather indomitable, and there are several periods of their life when she demonstrated considerable resolve. The fact that all of Sir Richard's manors, etc, were left to Mary (rather than the children), showed that she was considered to be of sufficient wisdom to make her own decisions regarding provisions for their children.

[Translation of the above]: Elizabeth by the grace of God queen of England, France and Ireland, defender of the Faith, etc. sends greetings to her faithful Sir William BEVILLE and to her well-beloved George GRENVILLE, esquire, Christopher HARRIS, esquire, Philip BEVILLE, esquire, eschaetor of the county of Cornwall, William SAMUEL [written as TAMUEL], gentleman feodary of the said county and John CONNOCKE, gentleman, deputy feodary of the duchy of Cornwall, You are to know that we have appointed you (five, four or three of you, of whom we wish that you the said feodary and eschaetor or deputy feodary should be two) to make enquiry under the oath of trustworthy and competent men of our said county of Cornwall, both among those free and unfree, by which the truth of the matter may be better established, how many lands and tenements Sir Richard GRENVILLE deceased, or any person or persons for his use, held from us as tenant in chief, both in lordship and in service, in the said county on the day when the said Richard died, and how many [he held] from others, and by what service, and what those lands and tenements, held both from us and from others, might be worth yearly in all their outgoing, and on what day the said Richard died, and who might be his closest heir, and of what age. And you are to take and appropriate these lands and tenements into our hands [and enquire] more fully into the truth of the matters and circumstances affecting them. And therefore we instruct you (five, four or three of you, of whom we wish that you the said feodary and eschaetor or deputy feodary should be two), that at certain days and places which you will stipulate, an enquiry should be diligently made into these matters, and having been particularly and openly done, it should be dispatched to our chancery under the seals of five, four or three of you (of whom we wish that you the said feodary and eschaetor or deputy feodary should be two), and the seals of those by whom it will be done, together with these letters patent. We direct, therefore, by the tenor of these present letters that the sheriff of our said county should, at certain days and places which you will impart to him, convene before you five, four or three of you, of whom we wish that you the said feodary and eschaetor or deputy feodary should be two, as many and such upright and competent men in your area of jurisdiction, both among the free and unfree, by whom the truth of this matter may be better known and investigated. In witness of which we have caused these our letters patent to be issued. With myself as witness, given at Westminster on the ninth day of December in the thirty-fourth year of our reign [1591].

Summary and Comments:

This document confirms that the manors and lands at Kilkhampton, Woolstone, Poundstocke, Widmouth, Bennamy, Stratton, Woodford, and Bideford are to be held by trustees for the use of Dame Mary the widow of Sir Richard. If Mary marries, then these properties are to go to Richard's eldest son and heir Bernard.

Other lands are mentioned in Gwennap, Week St Mary, Morwenstow, Tytismarche and Poundstock.

It was stated that the Manor of Bideford and advowson of the church there, were held of Queen Elizabeth, through military service.

This inquisition was held at Bodmin in Cornwall, where the remit was to record what lands Sir Richard GRENVILLE had in that County. There was a further inquisition held in Devon, and this presumably records more detail about the Devon lands. This document has not been examined, but is housed in the National Archives, ref: C 142/237/138.

Summary and Comments:

This document was written the year following the death of Sir Richard GRENVILLE on the Revenge at Flores.

The Irish estates were tied up in legal dispute even before Sir Richard's death in 1591, so the brotherly love mentioned here, is perhaps ironic. But this is an important document in resolving a long standing problem with Sir Richard GRENVILLE's estates in Ireland. It is documented elsewhere that three years later in 1595, Warham St Leger & others petitioned Elizabeth I, that John GRENVILLE (2nd son of Sir Richard) should have the right of title to Sir Richard GRENVILLE's estates in Ireland. But here we have legal confirmation that Sir Bernard gave their fathers Irish estate to his younger brother John in 1592.

The tragedy is that more or less at the time the wrangle was resolved in John GRENVILLE's favour in 1595, he was a dying captain on board one of Raleigh's ships at Guyana.

The mention of Mary GRENVILLE, (nee St LEGER) wife of Sir Richard GRENVILLE receiving this document on behalf of her son John, is one of the few documentary references we have to her.

The signatory Phillip BEVILL is Sir Bernard GRENVILLE's father-in-law, who lived at Killigarth near Looe in Cornwall, although actually this was his wife's inheritance (Elizabeth BEVILL) from her family. The Killigarth Estate was handed down to Sir Bernard GRENVILLE, who probably used it as a holiday home and/or planned to make it his retirement abode.

Summary and Comments:

Although this Will doesn't tell us precisely where Mary lived, it is possible to understand a bit more about the GRENVILLE family.

Mary's date of birth is unknown but is generally accepted to have been about 1543 at Annery near Weare Giffard. Mary was probably christened at nearby Monkleigh. She died 9th November 1623 and was almost certainly buried in the Crypt at St Mary's Bideford, aged 80. There is a plaque on the wall of what was originally called the GRENVILLE chapel in the present church which gives testimony to this, and it is consistent with the Parish records and other sources. It should also be noted that the inventory of her goods was made just two days after her death, probably before her burial had even been carried out.

She appears to have lived fairly simply, although three servants are specifically mentioned. Her effects are mostly household items, and no responsibility for property is referred to, this having been passed down the male line many years previously.

Given that Mary's daughter Ursula GRENVILLE is mentioned as being specifically placed under the care of her two sisters (Katherine and Bridget), it is possible that she might have had some kind of disability. We do know that she died unmarried, and was buried at Bideford twenty years later, in 1643.

Katherine GRENVILLE went on to marry Justinian ABBOT of Hartland Abbey.

Bridget GRENVILLE married John WEEKS the Rector of Shirwell, and she is buried in Bristol Cathedral. We also note from the Will, mention of Grenville WEEKS and cousin Symon WEEKES.

The TREMAYNE family of Poundstock also referred to are one of the numerous cousins of the GRENVILLE family.

Summary and Comments:

This document was written the year after the death of Mary GRENVILLE (nee St LEGER), widow of Sir Richard GRENVILLE. It appears to be a Deed of Inheritance, produced by Sir Bernard GRENVILLE who was living at Stowe at the time, and refers to a large number of properties, ie:

Devon: Bideford, Lundy Island, Knightshayes.

Cornwall: Killigarth, Kilkhampton, Wolston, Timell, Stratton, Widmouth, Woodford, Lanowmere, Renwyn, Bodmin, Trewithlicke, Stow, Dinsmouth, Clifton, Brynn (Great & Little), North Leigh, Trendant, Talland.

Wales: Neath.

Hampshire: Andover.

All of these properties are being passed from father to son, ie: from Sir Bernard GRENVILLE to his first-born son Sir Bevil GRENVILLE.

Of the above properties and manors, only two are mentioned in detail, these being Bideford, and Killigarth. Everything else (Stowe included) is termed as being the remainder of the GRENVILLE estate, so that on the death of Sir Bernard, Sir Bevil is free to do as he sees fit with these ancillary estates. This suggests that Stowe was not a favoured residence by the time of Sir Bernard, indeed his father (Sir Richard GRENVILLE) was also rather condemning of Stowe.

Killigarth is favoured, and was perhaps seen as a holiday or retirement home for later in life, this estate having been passed down to Sir Bernard's wife by her father Phillip BEVILL, so not a traditional GRENVILLE inheritance.

The Bideford estate is mentioned first, and is discussed by Sir Bernard in specific context with Sir Bevil his son and heir, who we can probably assume, was resident in Bideford at that time. This reinforces the theory that the first-born sons were given Bideford as their first family home following marriage. Thus Bideford's claim as the birthplace of Sir Richard GRENVILLE becomes even stronger, as his father (Sir Roger GRENVILLE) by this same process would have been given Bideford. In respect of the description of the Bideford estate, we have reference to the Burrough Manor and Barton, and later of the Advowson and Rectory.

The 'Manor' is largely an administrative term, giving rights to the Lord of the Manor over (in this case) whatever has been agreed in the Town Charter. It may or may not include a traditional Manor House, as Lords of the Manor did not necessarily live within the parish, although they probably had an administrative office there where Courts could be held. The 'Barton' was originally the term for the ancillary farm buildings around the Manor, but in the case of a town 'Barton' its use is a little less clear. Presumably it refers to other ancillary buildings in the town belonging to the manor. The 'Advowson' gives the estate-owner the right to appoint a parish priest. The 'Rectory' became part of this appointment, and enabled the priest to earn his living from income derived from lands associated with this position.

The other names mentioned in the Deed (John ARUNDELL, Anthony DENNYS and Edmond TREMAYNE) appear to be Trustees in respect of this inheritance, and were all known to be in-laws, cousins, & uncles of the GRENVILLE family). One of the witnesses Symon WEEKES may have been a relative of John WEEKES who married Sir Richard GRENVILLE's daughter Bridget.

Summary and Comments:

Although damaged, and written in extreme legalised language, the meaning of this document can just about be determined, but it is felt that the document is not quite 'what it says on the wrapper', or in the catalogue.

It appears neither to be an Agreement to Levy Fine, or a Marriage Settlement (Bevill GRENVILLE and Grace SMITH's first child was baptised in March 1620/21, so they were probably married in 1619 – five years before this 'settlement' was written).

It is described as an Indenture, and is between Sir Bernard GRENVILLE, and his son Bevill, and Bevill's wife Grace. There are three witnesses (John ARUNDELL, Anthony DENNYS, Edmund TREMAYNE), all of these being related by marriage to the GRENVILLE family.

This could in effect be a Last Will and Testament in a similar way as Sir Richard GRENVILLE wrote his in the form of an indenture in 1585. It must have worked well for the family, and his son Bernard made this similar arrangement, to confirm what should happen to his estate.

The list of debts (or fines), are clearly monies owed that Sir Bernard was evidently not ruthless enough to want to collect in some form during his tenure (Sir Bernard gave up much of the powers his father had created, to the Town Council in the Charter of 1610).

At the time of writing this indenture (Feb 1624), the head of the GRENVILLE family had recently died (Dame Mary GRENVILLE) in Nov 1623, and Sir Bernard had already lost three sons and a daughter by this time. His remaining children were as follows:

- Bevill.
- John, who took to religion and would probably have forsaken all worldly goods and inheritances.
- Richard 'Skellum', who was already a somewhat risky investment for the estate.
- Gertrude, who as a female didn't count whilst there were other male siblings, although she did live to be 86.

Bevill was Sir Bernard's only practical heir, and this document confirmed this. An indenture naming in-laws and cousins in the event of Bevill's death seems to have been his only choice to ensure the security of the GRENVILLE Inheritance.

As regards the examinations on the back of the document, these appear to suggest that checks were being made as to his right of title, possibly because of John GRENVILLE's increasing need to borrow monies or seek sureties after the Civil War.

Summary and Comments:

In 1633, it appears that one of the leased GRENVILLE land holdings in Bideford was being re-assigned. Nicholas EYRE's lease on this property has ended, and it is being let for four years to an Anthony HILL. Income from such a considerable property was obviously of great benefit to the GRENVILLEs, and £120 a year, indicates that this was a sizeable estate (probably around £250,000 per annum in today's terms).

We have a specific reference to the property in question, this being the 'Barton Grange or Farm', although the exact location of this Barton is unknown, apart from it being in Bideford. However, the rights associated with this Barton included: fishing in the pool of the river near the bridge, and part of the income from the coal workings on this land. The only known coal outcrops within Bideford appear at Pitt, and on land East-the-Water. Assuming the land was contiguous, we are probably talking about an East-the-Water property here.

This document only appears to refer to a particular individual property (ie: the Barton) and not to any other manorial lands or rights controlled by the GRENVILLEs.

Anthony HILL of Redland in Glos (not Podland, as stated in the catalogue description) appears to have control of many other lands, particularly in Timberscombe in Somerset. In 1638 Captain Anthony HILL of Redland in Gloucestershire took an Oath of Allegiance before Charles I, and was given permission to travel abroad for 3 years, particularly to the 'Low Countries'. He died around 1646, and his Will from this date survives in the Somerset Record Office collection of Timberscombe deeds.

Whether there is any connection between this Anthony HILL, and the John HILL (Town Clerk) who later appears living in the Bridge Street properties, has been unable to be determined.

John STRANGE and John SALTERNE are members of the Town Council of the period.

Will of Sir Bevill GRENVILLE, 1639

The original Will of Sir Bevill GRENVILLE (born 1596, killed at the Battle of Lansdowne on 5th July 1643) was thought to have been lost/destroyed during WW2.

However, a note found in the Royal Institution of Cornwall Archives refers to “The Will of Sir Bevill GRENVILLE, 10th April 1639/40, made prior to his service in Scotland, Sold at Bloomsbury Auctions 16th November 2006, purchaser unknown. MS on vellum, lacks seal, 640mm x 700mm. Estimate £200-£300, sold for about £450. Lot 45.”

This transcript produced by David Carter was taken from the 16 volume set of ‘Historical Collections relating to the History, Antiquities and Families of Devonshire, by Robert Dymond’ (Vol.9, pages 125-131, obtained from Westcountry Studies Library in Exeter). It appears to be genuine and verbatim.

There is no mention of the Grant of Probate in this transcript, but we assume that this did happen, probably soon after July 1643.

Will of Sir Bevill GRENVILLE (1596-1643)
(Grandson of the celebrated Sir Richard GRENVILLE)
Written 10th April 1639
Proved 1643 ?

In the name of God, Amen. The tenth day of April in the fifteenth year of the Raigne of our Sovereigne Lord Charles, by the grace of God, King of England, Scotland, Fraunce and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, etc.

I Beville GRENVILLE of Stowe in the countie of Cornwall esquire, being in good health of Body and of sound and perfect mynde and memory, (for which I heartily thank Almighty God) Doe make and ordain this my last Will and Testament in writing.

And First I commend my soul into the Hands of Almighty God my maker and Redeemer, in full assurance that all my sons are washed away by the precious blood of Jesus Christ my Saviour who is the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world, and that at the last day I shall be presented to him without spot, and received into his kingdom of glory there to live forever. My Body I commend to the earth from whence it came to be decently interred.

And whereas I have by my Deed indented bearing date the ninth day of April in the fifteenth year of the raign of our sovereign Lord King Charles [ie: 1539] conveyed and assured the Burrough and Mannor of Bydeford in the County of Devon with the rights, members and appurtenances thereof, and the right of patronage of the Parish Church of Bydeford, with the Burrough and mannor of Kilkhampton in the said County of Cornwall, with the rights members and appurtenances thereof, with the right of patronage of the Parish Church of Kilkhampton, and the Capital Messuage, Bartons and Demesnes of Stowe and Densmouth, with the appurtenances in Kilkhampton aforesaid, and the mannor, Capital Messuage Barton and Demesnes of Wolston, and the mannors of Wydmouth and Woodford in the said County of Cornwall with the members and appurtenances thereof. And the Mannor Capital Messuages Barton and Demesnes of Northleigh in the parishes of Kilkhampton and Moorewenstowe with the rights members and appurtenances thereof. And all the messuages lands tenements and hereditaments in the parishes of Kilkhampton Moorewenstowe and Stratton in the said County of Cornwall which I purchased of Nicholas SMYTH esq deceased, and were sometime parcell of the mannors of Michell Morton in the said county of Cornwall, And the advowson or patronage of the Rectory and Parish Church of St Mary Weeke in Cornwall aforesaid, unto my loving friends, John ARUNDELL of Trerise esquire, John ACLAND of Colume John esquire, Arthur BASSETT of Heanton Punchardon esquire, Anthony DENYS of Orleigh esquire, Richard PRIDEAUX of Thurborough esquire, and William MORRICE of Thurstom(?) esquire, To have to them and their heirs to the use of them and their heirs for ever. Nevertheless to the Intent and purpose and upon condition that they and the survivors and the survivor of them and his & their heirs should demise, lease, grant, convey, assure, or otherwise dispose of the same and such and so many of them and such parts and parcells of them or any of them in such manner and for such estate and for such uses intents and purposes as I by my last Will and Testament in writing should limit appoint and declare as by the same deed whereunto for more certentie therein I refer myself. And forasmuch as Grace my wife hath always been a most loving & virtuous wife unto mee and her deserts farr exceed and ~g~ital which my fortune can afford I do limit appoint & declare that my said wife shall and may during her life quietly have and enjoy such and so much of the mannors, messuages, land, tenements & hereditaments before mentioned as are by any deed or assurance limited to her for a jointure, and that my feoffees John ARUNDELL esquire, John ACLAND esquire, Arthur BASSETT esquire, Anthony DENYS esquire, Richard PRYDEAX and William MORRICE esquire, and the survivors & survivor of them and his & their heirs shall upon request after my death sufficiently assure unto the said Grace, my beloved wife, all those messuages, mills, lands, tenements & hereditaments called or known by the name of Stowe Mills or used or enjoyed with the same messuages and mills in Kilkhampton aforesaid and the reversion thereof. And also all these several Grounds and Parcels of Land called or known by the several names of Cleve and of Colworthy all which I have lately annexed to my Barton and Demesnes to be therewith used and enjoyed. To have to her the said Grace for and during the term of her natural life in augmentation of her jointure, and as a remembrance of my love to her, and my desire to my said feoffees is that my said wife may not be troubled or molested in quiet enjoyment of her said jointure and lands aforesaid but may be by them aided and assisted as much as they may. And I do hereby further declare, limit and appoint & my will and meaning is that my said feoffees John ARUNDELL, John ACLAND, Arthur BASSETT, Anthony DENYS, Richard PRYDEAX and William MORRICE and the survivors & survivor of them and their and his heirs out of the Rents, Issues and Profits of my said manors, manors (sic), lands, tenements & hereditaments or by demising or leasing all of any part of parts thereof in Possession, Reversion, Remainder of Expectancy at their wills and pleasures and by such sum or sums of money as shall be raised and had by the granting and selling of the inheritance in fee simple of any part of parts thereof shall satisfy, pay and discharge all the just and true debts and sums of money which I do owe or am indebted to any person or persons for mine own proper debt and also the annuities and yearly sums, legacies, gifts, portions, sum or sums of money given, limited, or appointed to any person by this my last Will & Testament and for that the particular accidents which may happen to my said manor lands and premises in the value thereof I do therefore limit appoint & declare and my will & meaning is that my said feoffes John ARUNDELL, John ACLAND, Arthur BASSETT, Anthony DENYS, Richard PRYDEAUX and William MORRICE and to the survivors and survivor of them their and his heirs shall and may from time to time and at all times demise and lease or grant, convey and sell the inheritance of the said manors messuages, lands and premises or such or so much of them or any of them and such parts and tenements, parcels of them, for such uses, intents & purposes as are in this my Will & Testament limited, appointed or declared and the performance and execution of the tment(?) in them uposed and they and the survivors and survivor their and his heirs shall in their wisdom think fit and convenient for the same. And I do limit and appoint and my will is that during the time of payment of my debts and legacies and until the same be fully paid and discharged that my said feoffees and the survivors and survivor of them their & his heirs shall pay and satisfy unto my son and heir apparent Richard GRENVILLE gentleman an annuity or party Rent of one hundred pounds yearly to be issuing and going or of such of the premises as my said feoffees and the survivors and survivor of them their and his heirs shall lymit and appoint to be yearly payable at the Feats of St John Baptist, St Michael the Archangel, The Birth of our Lord God and the Annunciation of our blessed Lady St Mary the Virgin by equal portions. And I do hereby give and appoint the said annuity unto my son Richard to be received in manner aforesaid.

Item: I do give limit and appoint to each of my younger sons (viz.) John GRENVILE, Bernard GRENVILE, George GRENVILE, and Denys GRENVILE one annuity or yearly sum of twenty pounds yearly apiece to be paid to each of them at the four feasts aforesaid until each of them respectively shall attain to his several age of seventeen years and as each of them shall attain to his several age of seventeen years, then the payment of the said annuity of twenty pounds yearly of him so attaining to his age of seventeen years to cease and determine. And I do further limit appoint & declare and my will is that within some short time after each of my younger sons shall severally attain to his said age of seventeen years and as each of them respectively shall attain to his said age of seventeen years that one annuity & yearly rent of fifty pounds be granted and assured to each of my said younger sons John, Bernard, George & Denys respectively to be issuing to each of them during his natural life respectively with clauses or distress, the same to be done in such manner as Counsel learned in the Law shall reasonably devise by the appointment of my said feoffees and the survivors and survivor their and his heirs.

Item: I do give, limit, appoint and declare to my eldest daughter Elizabeth GRENVILE the sum of one thousand five hundred pounds of lawful money of England portion, and to each of my other daughters (viz.) Bridget GRENVILE, Joane GRENVILE, and Mary GRENVILE the sum of one thousand pounds of lawful money of England apiece, so to be raised out of the rents issues and profits of the said manors messuages lands and premises or by demising and leasing or by sale of the inheritance of some part thereof as my said foeffes and the survivors and survivor their and his heirs shall think fit & convenient the said several portions to be paid to me said daughters respectively as they shall accomplish their several ages of twenty years or sooner if conveniently the same may be raised and until their said several portions shall be fully paid unto them I do give, limit and appoint to each of them the sum of forty marks yearly to be paid to them respectively for their maintenance and livelihood out of the rents, issues & profit of the said manors messuages lands tenements and hereditaments aforesaid, Provided always and I do hereby limit, appoint and declare that of Grace my said wife and Richard my son or such other of my said sons as shall be my right heir the time or one of them shall within one year next after the death of Dame Grace SMYTH widow by sufficient assurances in law convey & assure All the manors messuages, land, tenements and hereditaments with the appurtenances in the said County of Cornwall which the said Dame Grace SMYTH now holdeth & enjoyeth by conveyance and assurance from Sir George SMYTH Knight deceased her late husband and also the mansion house and lands therewithal used & enjoyed called or known by the name of Maydworth situate and being in the Parish of Heavitree in the County of Devon unto me said feoffees John ARUNDELL, John ACLAND, Arthur BASSETT, Anthony DENYS, Richard PRYDEAUX and William MORRICE and to the survivors and survivor of them their and his heirs or such other person or persons as shall be in that behalf appointed to be sold or disposed of by them or any of them for and towards the payment of my debts and legacies aforesaid and performance of the trust and uses in this my last Will mentioned that then the said feoffees John ARUNDELL, John ACLAND, Arthur BASSETT, Anthony DENYS, Richard PRYDEAUX and William MORRICE and to the survivors and survivor of them their and his heirs shall and may at the same time will and sufficiently as Counsel in the law shall reasonably advise convey and assure unto my said son Richard GRENVILE and his heirs or such other of my sons as shall be my heir if my said son Richard be dead and to his heirs such and so much of the said manors, messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments of the said Dame Grace SMITH as both parties shall and [space] and [space] unto. And I do hereby further [space] and declare and within some convenient time after my said debts and legacies before mentioned be satisfied and paid as aforesaid. That they my said feoffees and the survivors and survivor of them and his heirs shall by good assurance in the law at the charge of my heirs convey and assure unto my said son Richard GRENVILE and his heirs or unto such of my sons as shall be my heir All such and so many of the said manors, messuages, hereditaments and premises by me to them conveyed and assured as aforesaid as shall then remain unsold and undisposed of for the uses and purposes aforesaid if any do remain unsold and not disposed of charged nevertheless unto the several annuities to my said younger sons during the continuance thereof respectively And I do will give and appoint that all my plate lynen and other utensils of household and household stuff and the furniture of my house at Stowe aforesaid to remain and continue in my said house and to come to my son and heir which shall be owner of my said house. Summary and Comments:

This document confirms that Sir Bevill GRENVILLEs main residence was at Stowe in Cornwall, but that amongst his many other inherited and land-investments, the Burrough and Manor of Bideford was top of the list of importance.

The Will refers to the personal effects of Sir Bevill being at his house at Stowe, and that his wife was granted rights to live her remaining life at Stowe (just as Dame Mary GRENVILLE was granted at Bideford).

Since Sir Bevill's son and heir was Richard GRENVILLE (who failed to inherit), this strongly suggests that his second son & heir John GRENVILLE (1st Earl of Bath) must have lived at Bideford, even though at least two of his children were born elsewhere. We are continuing to see a repeat of the pattern where the inheriting son has to settle for whichever house his parents chose not to live while they remained alive.

Of the foeffes mentioned:

ARUNDELL, ACLAND, BASSETT, and DENYS, were cousins through Bevil GRENVILLE's forefathers. Richard PRIDEAUX was the father in-law of Bevil's daughter Elizabeth who married Sir Peter PRIDEAUX.

William MORRICE was described by Bevil as 'my dear and noble friend' and also as 'cousin', but their exact genealogical connection is unclear, although he does appear to have been a fellow Civil War officer.

But in effect all these 'feoffes' are family members simply looking after the family estates.

Summary and Comments:

After the death of Sir Bevil GRENVILLE in the Battle of Lansdowne in 1643, his widow Grace is seen here selling off various land investments inherited by her. These seem to be ancillary properties, and consist of the following:

- House and land in Bideford, in occupation of John HEARD.
- Land and woods in Alwington, in occupation of John, William & Anthony GYFFORD.
- House and land called Haypaules in Littleham, in occupation of Mr SHURTE.
- Land called North Stert, in Parkham, in occupation of Anthonie LEMON.
- Cottage called Stert, in Parkham, in occupation of Agnes TRICKE.
- House and land called Belliford in Buckland Brewer, in occupation of John TURNER.
- Land called Scarletts Wells in Bodmin, Cornwall, in occupation of Elizabeth COCKE.
- House in Bodmin in occupation of George HELLYER.
- House in Bodmin in occupation of Johane LANE.
- House in Bodmin in occupation of Ralphe MICHELL.

They are being sold to a gentleman called Simon COTELL. He was probably the man of the same name who was Treasurer of Cornwall during the Civil War. The above document confirms his house being at Wolleigh in Morwenstowe.

This document confirms the exchange by 'Bargain and Sale', ie: when the seller offers such properties on the same basis as they were owned, there being no guarantee regarding good title. The properties were being offered for 1,000 years, to start on 13th July 1547.

John GYFFORD is almost certainly the son of the John GYFFORD who married Mary, daughter of Sir Richard GRENVILLE, although there were seemingly hundreds of GYFFORDs spread from Weare Giffard as far as Chittlehampton and Tiverton, to Milton Damerel and Parkham.

Probate granted in London 15th June 1647.

Summary and Comments:

This is a fairly basic nuncupative will (ie: death-bed statement recorded by witnesses), not giving much, expect the social-colour of Grace still having a number of servants.

There is no specific mention of lands or property, indeed it doesn't even say that Grace was of Bideford, so she may well have been living at Stowe at the time of her death.

Grace's Will was probably written at a time when the GRENVILLE fortunes had declined for a while; certainly between Sir Richard's death in 1591 and around the Civil War.

Summary and Comments:

John GRENVILLE is almost certainly raising money here for the Royalist cause by mortgaging Bideford Manor and estate. £3,250 is being borrowed from Dame Margaret CHOLMELEY on the security of his estate at Bideford, for a term of 500 years.

Richard LANE could be the Richard LANE who was part of Charles II's Privy Council. He was also a Barrister. He fled with the King to the Channel Isles in 1650 (only to die there in May of that year.) This document was written before his death in February 1650. If they are one and the same, this would lend credence to the revenue-raising theory for the Royalists as Richard LANE was in charge of the Exchequer of Charles II.

Edward COOKE's identity is a little more vague. He could be of the COOKEs who owned Thorne Manor near Holsworthy. They were Royalists. If so then Edward's mother was a daughter of the GODOLPHINS, another high profile Royalist family.

S. ORCHARD is probably part of the same ORCHARD family who went on to own Hartland Abbey.

Summary and Comments:

This document confirms the assignment of all the manorial lands and rights inherited by the GRENVILLE family, and which ended up in control of John GRENVILLE the First Earl of Bath. The lands were extensive, but at the top of the list is the Burrough, Manor and Barton of Bideford. This document is a continuance of G-3205 (1650) where the Bideford Manor Lands were mortgaged.

John GRENVILLE mortgaged much of the family fortune to fund the Royalist cause during the English Civil War, and it seems as though this loan was not paid back by the date stipulated, so Dame Margaret CHOLMELEY became possessed of the property for the term of 500 years. In consideration of the £3,250 debt paid to her and £750 to John GRENVILLE by Orlando BRIDGEMAN & Jeffery PALMER, the property is assigned to them as trustees to hold it for the term of 500 years.

However, an intended marriage was due to take place between John GRENVILLE and Jane WYCHE, and this document confirms that if this took place, the trustees shall, at the expense of GRENVILLE, convey the property to such person as holds the reversion (ie GRENVILLE) and the 500 year term is declared void. If the marriage did not take place, the trustees shall hold the property for the 500 year term on behalf of Jane WYCHE in lieu of part of her marriage portion equating to the sum of £4,000. As soon as the the loan had been repaid, Dame Margaret's involvement ended.

BRIDGEMAN and PALMER were both Baronets and staunch Royalists, no doubt comrades-in-arms with John GRENVILLE who was himself a prominent Royalist. Given that they were from the Inns of Court, they were also probably lawyers. Margaret CHOLMELEY's position and status has not been able to be determined.

This document ties in with the intervention of Charles II in the GRENVILLE affairs, as it was he who in gratitude for John GRENVILLE's support in his re-instatement as King, settled/dismissed all charges and debts that John GRENVILLE had accrued during the Civil War, knighted him for his bravery, and later conferred him with the titles of Earl of Bath, Viscount GRANVILLE, and Baron GRANVILLE.

Summary and Comments:

Some significant parts of this document have been worn away in a crease, but this is a fairly brief document, which appears to be partly a precursor to the 1666 document transcribed in Appendix 25 (BRAB-328/19).

John GRENVILLE is able to obtain money with his estates offered as collateral. The money is undoubtedly being raised to finance the return of Charles II and the restoration of the Monarchy a few years later. No actual sum is mentioned here, but it was probably felt that the estates were an adequate guarantee for any possible debts that John GRENVILLE might accrue.

In 1652 John GRENVILLE married Jane WYCHE, the daughter of Sir Cyrill WYCHE and Jane (nee MEREDITH). Sir William MEREDITH of Leeds Abbey was the father of Jane MEREDITH, so in effect John GRANVILLE was borrowing money from his father-in-law, and his wife’s grand-father. Obviously Royalists, they were able to lobby their cause by financing the restoration, and offered the best security and source of finance to John GRENVILLE.

Dame Jane MEYRICK was the wife of Sir Cyrill WYCHE, these being the parents of Jane GRENVILLE (nee WYCHE), wife of John GRENVILLE, Dame Jane having re-married after her husband Cyrill’s death.

Much of the complex web surrounding 1657 relates to the move to re-instate Charles II. Oliver CROMWELL died in 1658, and his son Richard was appointed to succeed him, but was not up to the job, and there were many political discussions as to how to resolve the situation.

The previous year, Sir John GRENVILLE was elected member for Newport in Wales along with William MORICE – a surname which appears in other places in these documents. William MORICE is alleged to have proclaimed to Richard CROMWELL that the west of England was keen to see the return of the King (Charles II). Richard CROMWELL did not appear to object to this as it was soon afterwards that the process started, aimed at financing and obtaining the return of Charles II.

Since we now know that Charles II later wrote off all of John GRENVILLE's debts, it appears that John GRENVILLE effectively mortgaged much of the GRENVILLE estate to fund that return knowing that if successful all would be well and he would curry substantial favour (which he did).

All this explanation serves to explain the reason behind these documents, and also to confirm the close family relationship that the GRENVILLEs had with the WYCHE, MEREDITH, MEYRICK and MORICE families. In particular, the Coat-of-Arms painted on the wall of No.1 Bridge Street is identical to the arms of William MEREDITH of Leeds Abbey, and is therefore the ancestral Arms of Jane WYCHE, wife of John GRENVILLE.

Summary and Comments:

This document refers to the lands previously assigned in 1652 by John GRENVILLE the first Earl of Bath to Sir Henry PALMER.

The various manorial lands and rights were owned by the GRENVILLE family, namely John GRENVILLE the first Earl of Bath, until 1652. Top of the list of leased lands is the Burrough, Manor and Barton of Bideford, although the portfolio of lands is extensive.

Dame Jane MEYRICK is Jane WYCHE, the mother of Jane GRENVILLE (nee WYCHE), wife of John GRENVILLE, (she re-married after her husband's death), as has been explained in the previous document.

Summary and Comments:

This document confirms the lease by John GRANVILLE, 1st Earl of Bath of various lands and rights belonging to a property in Bideford called 'Porte'; to Nicholas MORICE, son of the King's principal secretary. It shows that in 1664, the GRANVILLE family still had various parts of Bideford in portfolio of land investment.

The location of the property mentioned in this document are unclear, but given the comments about coal and the rights to the wood and fishing it seems to refer to East-the-Water as the only other coal location in Bideford was around Pitt Lane and that location would simply not have provided all the other benefits. As such it is probably the same property referred to in G-3002 (1633), although at that time it was referred to as the Barton or Grange Farm. Here we have reference to it being called 'Porte'.

Nicholas MORICE was an M.P. of no particular repute, but the MORICE family did have close links with the GRENVILLES.

Henry BERRY and several other generations of BERRYS lived at Eastleigh Manor from about 1500 to after 1701.

Summary and Comments:

This seems to be an annulment of the Town Council's claims on the GRENVILLE estate in the Manor of Bideford, probably related to Charles II's involvement in settling John GRENVILLE's debts.

Summary and Comments:

This appears to be a document from John GRENVILLE saying that he discharges the Town Council of all previous claims made by him against them. The underlying reason for this is unknown.

Interestingly, the only full list of serving Council Officers prior to 1851, was in 1574. This document adds significantly to the History of Bideford Borough, as it gives a full list of Aldermen and Burgesses serving in 1665.

Of note is that John FROST also mentioned was Mayor in 1666 and again in 1675.

Summary and Comments:

This relates to the previous 1652 and 1657 documents transcribed above (they are specifically mentioned in this document).

It talks about John GRENVILLE's debts, and suggests that the properties subjected to mortgages/ rents etc, in 1657 did not get paid after 1660 by Sir John. (The sum of £1040 being the amount owing). It appears that an agreement was reached to sell off some of the estates mentioned in settlement of that debt, while others would be retained in a manner which allowed John and his wife Jane to live until their dying days.

However this is effectively irrelevant, as we know Charles II discharged John GRENVILLE of all his debts accrued.

Interpreting all these complex financial fines and leases, leaves an over-riding impression that John GRENVILLE was not at all good with money, and this may explain why John's son and heir eventually committed suicide over debts.

Document Catalogue Description:

Ref: East-the-Water, Bideford SS 465264

Title: A Mapp of the Tenement of Grange upon the East land in the Mannor and Parish of Bideford in the County of Devon.

Surveyor: Joel GASCOYNE

Date: c.1699/1700

North Devon Record Office reference – 2379A/Z38/12

“After a career in London as a chartmaker GASCOYNE turned to land surveying. He came to the South West some time after 1693 and surveyed some 258 landholdings for Baron ROBARTES of Lanhydrock between 1694 and 1699. At the same time he surveyed and produced, in 1699, his near one-inch-to-the-mile map of Cornwall. GASCOYNE also produced an Atlas of some 33 estate maps for the GRENVILLE family of Stowe near Kilkhampton and so the move to map the GRENVILLE lands in the Manor of Bideford could be a logical progression. The inclusion of number 28 on the top-right corner of the map and the suggestion of stitching on the left-side implies that the map of Grange was part of another Atlas.

The map shows fields north of the road from Bideford. Green is used to colour these fields but even so their use is clearly differentiated. Arable land has brown lines superimposed on the green background; green fields stippled with a deeper green are also classed as arable but this may well indicate those which were meadow/fallow at the time of mapping. Other areas in a pale green with darker shading are described as moor. Wood and orchards are shown with tree symbols. A table lists field names, their ‘Qualities’ (ie: land use) and ‘Quantities’ and this, with the colour and symbols seen here, is typical of all GASCOYNE’s work....

.... It is reasonable to suggest that maps of Devon estates would have formed the basis for such a county map; the GRENVILLE landholdings would have been a suitable starting point, and this map of Grange could well have been one of them. But it was not to be, for the death in 1701 of John GRENVILLE, Earl of Bath, deprived GASCOYNE of his patron, and no doubt led to the failure of this project.”

Summary and Comments:

This map has confirmed the location of the ‘Grange’ property East-the-Water in Bideford, which was mentioned in document G-3002 (1633), and probably also in G-2932 (1664) where it seems to have been given the name ‘Porte’.

Summary and Comments:

This document illustrates the gradual erosion of manorial lands and power to the present day. By 1881 it appears that just about all the former lands had been sold off, and the only properties specifically mentioned as part of this sale, was Bideford Market and its associated shambles, the nearby Dolphin Inn and another adjoining building.

Historically, a Lord-of-the-Manor had control over all his subjects, could tax them and make them work for him, but he was also responsible for the economic well-being of the community. He held local Courts concerning land rights, tenants, and law-breaking – indeed he had the power of capital punishment. Apart from the latter, many of these powers now lie with Local and National Government, but their origins lie in agreements made nearly a thousand years ago.

About Nimrod Research:

'Nimrod Research' (formerly Wiltshire's Nimrod Indexes) was founded in 1969 by Dr Barbara Carter, as specialist Family History researchers for Wiltshire.

David & Jenny Carter who run Nimrod Research now live in Devon, and have expanded this business to also undertake such research in Somerset and Devon.

David Carter has over 30 years experience in the Architecture, Building and Shopfitting industries, and combines his previous skills with the research business in order to provide historical building reports to accompany Listed Planning Applications, and other bespoke historical research.
